B.C. May Back Controls

Content Rule 80%

OTTAWA (CP) — Magazines such as Time and Reader's Digest must contain at least 80 per cent "Canadian" content if advertisers are to retain special tax status, Revenue Minister Bud Cullen announced today. (See earlier denial on Page 29.)

The decision, which also affects a number of smaller publications printed in Canada by foreign companies, was announced in a news release.

"Any issue of a periodical is disqualified as 'Canadian' if its contents, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of one or more issues of foreign periodicals," the release said.

"The government's policy requires that more than 80 per cent of the contents of a Canadian periodical must be material which has not appeared in any current or prior issues of foreign publications with which the Canadian periodical may have any type of continuing arrangement for access to material."

Exxon Profit Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil concern, said today profits in the third quarter fell 31.2 per cent from the year before.

The company earned $550 million, or $2.46 a share, after taxes in the latest three-month period, compared with $800 million, or $3.58 a share, in the 1974 quarter. Sales rose to $12.23 billion from $11.94 billion.

Woman Terrorist Won't Go

MONASTEREVIN, Ireland (AP) — Eddie Gallagher, one of two terrorists holding Dutch industrialist Tiede Herrema captive on the second floor of a besieged row house, told police today he wanted to give himself up.

But the 19-year-old girl with him, Marian Coyle, refused to let him and Herrema go.

"It looks like she's the tough one and she wants to see this thing through to the end," said one policeman.

Police said they will wait the terrorists out.

The siege continued in its third day, with Gallagher, the girl and their hostage barricaded behind mattresses in an upstairs room and police and armed soldiers occupying the ground floor.

Gallagher's offer, made to Chief Supt. Lawrence Wren of Dublin's crime squad, was the first crack in his defiance.

Wren told him he would make no deals, and Gallagher would have to bring Herrema down with him.

But Miss Coyle refused to let them go, the police said.

Growing Daily . . .

Victoria postmaster Marvin Glover (left) finds himself surrounded by a growing heap of unsorted mail as bags of it collected from local post boxes pile up behind him.

Above, letters rest unattended in mail slots where they will gather dust until contract dispute involving 22,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers is settled.

The post office headquarters in Ottawa has recommended to regional centres that mail boxes be sealed to prevent additional pile-up.

In the Commons, Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said the strike, in its third day, will not force him to accept the union's demands. (See story on Page 2.)

All-Out Attack Planned

Times News Services

Solid groundwork for an all-out attack on the federal government's new anti-inflation program was laid on two fronts Wednesday.

In Vancouver, leaders of 125,000 provincial and federal civil servants in British Columbia decided to fight the controls "because of inequities in it."

Following a meeting of 14 public service unions and professional associations, Jack Gerow, secretary-business manager of the Hospital Employees' Union, Local 180, said the group will seek a meeting with Premier Barrett to urge him not to join the program.

The 14 unions and associations are to set up a committee under the chairmanship of Bill Broadley, president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, to co-ordinate the campaign.

Among the other groups represented at the meeting were: Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union; B.C. Government Employees' Association; Vancouver Police Union; Public Service Alliance of Canada; College of Dental Surgeons; Registered Nurses; Health Sciences Association; Professional Institute of Public Service and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses' Association.

About 1,000 delegates to the Canadian Union of Public Employees national convention in Toronto were told by their new leader Grace Hartman that they should be prepared to take part, if necessary, in "our own demonstrations, lobbies and other forms of political action."

She urged delegates of the 210,000-member union to defy selective wage controls which limit about 4.3 million workers to a basic wage increase of 10 per cent.

"Through its wage freeze program, the Trudeau government has tried to severely restrict what we can negotiate at the bargaining table," said Hartman.

"If the Canadian Labor Congress is not prepared to take decisive militant action against the wage freeze, we will fight it on our own."

Shirley Carr of the Canadian Labor Congress said top executives of her organization also are opposed to the anti-inflation program because "it will effect a greater hardship on the workers than ever before."

The labor congress, which represents 1.8 million workers through its affiliated unions, has scheduled an emergency meeting of its executive council Friday to discuss the controls.

Carr said that federal government representatives are "going across the country and getting into every union meeting that they can get into."

"But solidarity is our message," she said. "We will stick together and we will not be divided."

Times News Services

Finance Minister Dave Stupich said today he will recommend the B.C. cabinet fully co-operate with the federal anti-inflation program.

In a telephone interview with the Times from Ottawa, Stupich said he felt the federal-provincial conference had gone well and that although there are still problems, the federal government has made some moves in most areas of concern to B.C.

"There seems to be general agreement the federal government does want this to work," said Stupich.

Other provincial representatives expressed similar concerns about the program as those voiced by B.C., he said.

B.C. wants a tightening up of controls on prices and profits and restraints on interest rates as well as federal government low interest mortgages for housing.

Stupich said he expects he will be able to say to cabinet: "Okay, it's not as good as we think it should be but the whole picture is clear enough and we should co-operate."

Premier Barrett has said he will make a public statement on B.C.'s final position Friday afternoon.

The two-day conference ended today with Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announcing "provincial authorization" to proceed with the program.

He said there may be a further meeting of finance ministers in a few weeks to iron out details. In the meantime a committee of officials will discuss the thorny issue of controls on incomes of professionals, such as doctors and lawyers.

Saskatchewan delegate Walter Smishek, health minister, told reporters: 'I am leaving with a feeling of deeper frustration than when I came.' There were too many unanswered questions and Ottawa was "buck-passing" on many issues.

The labor ministers were to meet later today on the implications of the anti-inflation program.

Wednesday in Ottawa, Macdonald said the government may amend its anti-inflation guidelines to allow wage increases of more than $600 for people at the low end of the income scale.

Macdonald said there were several other areas where the government might consider amendments.

However, he declined to specify them.

The minister said he would consider the provincial repre-

Problem Translates To $250M

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department is faced with what a spokesman calls a monumental problem of translating about one million pages of technical documents into French.

The spokesman said Wednesday the cost would be about $250 million over an indefinite period of years.

He said the problem is not properly defined yet — "we just know that it's there." There was no indication when the work would start.

The spokesman was commenting on a rumor that the task would cost as much as $500 million. He said that figure appears too high.

The translation is part of a program started in 1972 to make defence documentation and printing bilingual.

The program is in line with the forces' announced determination to reflect the French-English split in Canada. That means that eventually the forces will be 28 per cent Francophone at all levels.

The spokesman said in 1973 about 55 armed forces publications — drill manuals, dress manuals and the like — were bilingual. Today 415 have been translated and 300 are being translated — most to French from English.

About 65 per cent of the armed forces administrative orders, a massive set of papers running into several volumes, are in both languages and all new directives are coming out in both languages.

But translators now face two million pages of technical papers — everything from plans for planes to manufacturer's manuals on guns.

Lucky Phone Call Saves Anti-IRA MP

Times News Services

Her host, Conservative MP Hugh Fraser who owned the car, said neither she nor he was injured.

Police said the 8:53 a.m. blast killed Prof. Gordon Hamilton Fairley as he was taking his poodle for a morning walk.

Seven other persons, including a Filipino woman who worked as a cook and housemaid for Fraser, suffered minor injuries.

Fraser and Miss Kennedy, 17, had been planning to leave the house at about the time of the blast but a telephone call from a fellow MP kept them inside, Fraser said.

"Normally I would have been in the car when this happened but I was on the telephone," said Fraser, who in his public speeches has taken a tough stance against terrorism.

Fraser, a hard-line IRA opponent, has received many death threats recently, his secretary said.

"There is no doubt it was meant for me. Somebody obviously wants to blow me up," he said.

Fraser, 57, said the bomb would only harden his determination to crack down on terrorism.

Looking pale and distraught, Miss Kennedy stared straight ahead and said nothing as police guided her into a waiting auto.

The bombing was London's sixth in two months. The last, 10 days ago, killed a man near the Ritz Hotel.

Unofficial speculation linked the blast with life sentences given less than 24 hours earlier to three Irishmen and a London girl for planting a pub bomb that killed 12 persons earlier this year.

On Aug. 29, an explosives expert was killed in a blast on nearby Kensington High Street.

Thirteen days ago, a bomb killed a bystander and injured 20 persons at a bus stop shelter on Piccadilly, the heart of London's night life.

CELSIUS CHILL BLAMED FOR TOURISM DIP

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The federal government's metric conversion program has been cited as one of the reasons why British Columbia motel, resort and trailer park owners suffered an 11 per cent loss of business so far this year.

Mike Kowaluk, president of the B.C. Motel, Resort and Trailer Parks Association, which is holding its annual convention here, said many Americans haven't learned to relate to Celsius temperatures.

Kowaluk said when they hear a city is having 26-degree weather they think it is "darn cold."

He also blamed high food prices in B.C. for discouraging American tourists.

Socialists Mass For Lisbon Rally

LISBON (UPI) — The Socialist Party today accused Portugal's Communists of intentionally instigating a climate of anarchy at all levels of society.

The socialist attack came as thousands of left-wing soldiers and civilians filtered into Lisbon for a Communist-backed mass rally tonight against the Socialist-dominated government of Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro De Azevedo.

"The situation is grave, since the Communist Party participates in the sixth (provisional) government and continues to pretend support for the armed forces movement," the socialists said in a communique.

"The political agitation which the Communist Party intentially foments is introducing anarchy at all levels of Portuguese society in a disastrous way."

11 KILLED IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT (UPI) — Rival Lebanese militias traded rocket, mortar and machine gun fire across a deserted and frightened Beirut today.

Heavy fighting between rival Christian and Moslem militias raged through central and eastern Beirut, killing 11 persons and wounding 13.

A rocket-propelled grenade slammed into the fourth floor wing of the uptown Holiday Inn Wednesday night, causing some damage but no casualties.

Lebanese officials, meanwhile, tried to contact the kidnappers of two Americans, Charles Gallagher, 44, of Roanoke, Va., and William Dykes 65, of San Jose, Calif.

Mystery Dose of Chlorine Blamed for Big Fish Kill

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A massive dose of chlorine of uncertain origin was responsible for Sunday's sudden kill of more than 1.3 million salmon at the Capilano Hatchery, Environment Canada officials said Wednesday.

They said that either someone put the chemical into the hatchery water supply as an act of vandalism or sabotage, or the chlorine accidentally got into the hatchery water from the nearby chlorination plant of the Greater Vancouver Water District.

RCMP are investigating but so far have no concrete evidence of vandalism.

Frank Bunnell, chief commissioner of the water board, later said interviews with employees of the chlorine plant have shown that no one knows of any accidental turning of valves that could have fed chlorinated — instead of untreated — water to the hatchery.

Hans Krause, of the Greater Vancouver Water District, had said Sunday there was no possibility that the salmon had been poisoned by chlorine.

The hatchery gets most of its water from Capilano Lake, which also serves as a water supply for the city, but Krause said the hatchery water is piped off before the water is chlorinated for city use.

But he said that anyone who knew the water supply system for the hatchery would have no trouble introducing a poison into the water.

10 YEARS IN JAIL FOR YULE TREE THEFT

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — There is no mercy for a Christmas tree thief in Judge Willis Rittter's court.

The 76-year-old federal jurist threw the book at three men convicted Wednesday of stealing 276 Christmas trees from a national forest. He sentenced them to maximum terms of 10 years in prison and fined each $10,000.

"This is a very bad offense," he told Vernon Black, Richard Speir, and Gary Puffer after a jury found them guilty of taking the trees last December.

"These trees are an irreplacable natural resource," Ritter said. "I intend to take the profit out of this business, this devastation of the forests for a few bucks at Christmas time.

"Anybody who comes here for that (offense) is going to get the business," the judge declared.

Stupich Optimistic On Controls

sentations with his cabinet colleagues and perhaps introduce several amendments to legislation that is now before the Commons.

He said it would probably be "a matter of weeks" before he knew for certain if all the provinces were opting in to the federal plan. No province had "opted in" to date, he said.

Macdonald said he didn't agree with criticism of the federal plan on the grounds that it takes a tougher attitude toward wage controls than price controls.

"I think it is generally understood by the provinces that it is very difficult to control prices in advance," he stated.

Commenting on submissions by some of the provinces, Macdonald said he did not believe the tougher line on wages and profits proposed by Ontario would be satisfactory.

"The Ontario plan would create rigidity and inflexibility that would be difficult to administer," he said.

Macdonald said that a "surtax" of excessive wages, salaries and profits that exceed the guidelines might not be the best way to administer the anti-inflation program.

"A surtax would hardly be fair where there have been productivity gains," Macdonald stated.

The minister also told reporters that there will be a reduction in the number of federal civil servants over the next two years, as proposed by Ontario.

On Wednesday Macdonald said the program may require some companies to roll back current dividend rates or refrain from paying a fourth-quarter dividend. (See also Page 9)

He said the government remains firm in its stated intention to freeze, for a year, the dollar level of dividends at the level paid during a company's last completed fiscal year.

In other related developments:

● Manpower Minister Robert Andras said B.C.'s Premier Dave Barrett and federal New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent sound like "men who are not determined to fight inflation."

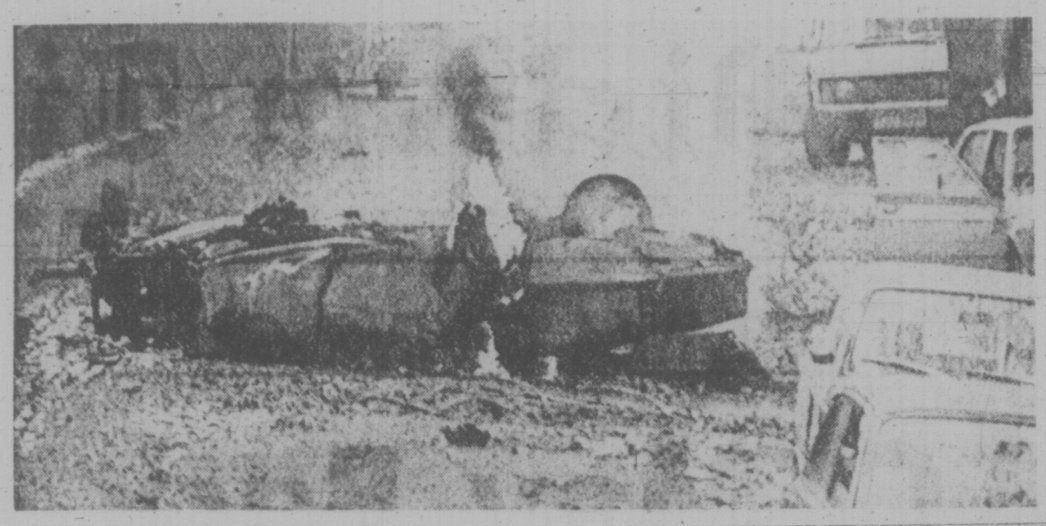
● Prime Minister Trudeau said in Regina federal price and income controls will be removed before the end of their statutory three-year term if the danger of rampant inflation is stopped before the term is up.

"But it may be longer," he told a Canadian club meeting. The need for controls will last until "Canadians are prepared in their hearts to live within their means."

● Progressive Conservative MP Jack Murta argued in the Commons major welfare spending cuts are essential to stop inflation.

The Manitoba farmer said the combined impact of medical care insurance, unemployment benefits, development grants and other social measures have placed an unbearable burden on the economy.

● Another Conservative, former prime minister John Deifenbaker, charged Wednesday that the government's anti-inflation legislation is a "complete hoax" because it allows the provinces to conduct their own programs.



Overturned Jaguar belonging to Tory MP Hugh Fraser blazes in the wake of today's killer explosion in London. Fraser says only a fortuitous phone call prevented him from being in the vehicle at the time of the blast, which killed one of Britain's leading cancer experts.

Cheque Delivery Set For Disabled

Senior citizens who are handicapped or shut in and cannot pick up Mincome and pension cheques should contact local human resources department offices.

A spokesman for the department said Wednesday arrangements could be made by local officials to have cheques delivered to those people for the duration of the postal strike.

He also urged everyone receiving government cheques to watch for advertising by local government offices on a system for picking up cheques.

Two cabinet ministers said in Ottawa today the government will do everything it can to ensure federal cheques are not delayed by the postal strike.

"As few people will suffer as possible," Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said, going into a cabinet meeting.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras said his department is making the same arrangements it did for the last postal strike — unemployment insurance cheques could be picked up at local offices if the recipients had identification.

The question of what will happen to November cheques for family allownaces, old age pensions and other social assistance programs was not clear.

This month's cheques were mailed about Oct. 10 and a spokesman for Mackasey said "the crunch doesn't come until Nov. 10."

He said the minister is loath to elaborate on alternative arrangements because they are part of a yet-unannounced general contingency program.

In the Commons Wednesday, Mackasey said the strike will not force him to accept postal demands.

Replying to opposition questions, he said that even if the government did not have an anti-inflation program, its pay offer would be the same.

DATSUN STILL UNBEATEN IN GAS MILEAGE
INTRODUCING DATSUN FOR 76
The new Datsuns have arrived. And for 1976, as always, they're an ideal combination of economy and driving pleasure. Economy is a time-honoured tradition at Datsun; but to us, the feel of the car is every bit as important.
Datsun's high gas mileage is a matter of public record by now. But we know there's a lot more to economy than just high gas mileage. That's why every Datsun is specifically engineered to last, so that you'll benefit from its traditionally high resale value. We keep our service costs down too. Our electrical and transmission checks can be done easily and quickly through special inspection areas, so time is spent fixing the trouble rather than finding it. When you buy a Datsun, you're buying overall economy, not just high gas mileage.
Datsuns feel great to drive. Because we've put over forty years of engineering expertise into every one. That's why the "Z", 710 and Sportruck feature power-efficient overhead cam engines. And that's why all our cars have disc brakes up front for added safety.
At Datsun, we haven't forgotten that cars are meant to be driven and enjoyed. Performance and feeling are as important to us as economy. The 1976 Datsuns are solid, secure, comfortable, responsive and, most of all fun to drive. Drive one, and feel the Datsun Spirit, at your Datsun dealer, today.
The Datsun B210, with a manual transmission gets 35 MPG in the city and 49 MPG on the highway, according to latest U.S. E.P.A. test results. Your gas mileage will depend on the kind of driving you do, the condition of your car, and its optional equipment.
Buy one for the economy, drive it for the feeling!
The Datsun Spirit... feel it.

An upper level weather system is giving a band of cloud across central B.C. today with a few snowflurries in the Central Interior. Elsewhere skies are relatively clear with many statons reporting light overnight frost. More cloud is expected to reach north and central B.C. on Friday as the ridge of high pressure slips southward. However southern areas should have mainly sunny skies.

MORE THAN 600 attended the Volunteer Fair this week at the University of Victoria. Sponsored by the Victoria Volunteer Bureau, there were 30 different displays. There was a lot of interest shown by students in doing volunteer work and most of the booths got lists of names of those willing to donate some of their spare time. (Photo by Bill Halkett)

Save Older House —Fernwood Appeal

A last-minute appeal to the Greater Victoria School Board will be made to save an old home on Chambers from the wrecking bar.

At a meeting of the Fernwood Community Association this week it was decided to send a delegation to the board's next meeting to see if the decision to tear down the building can be reversed.

The group wants the house for use by the community.

It's the last of five homes on Chambers to be torn down to make way for expansion of George Jay School.

The house in question is at the corner of Chambers and North Park, and is in good condition.

The house was offered to the Springfield Housing Co-op for removal or demolition but the co-op was unable to accept the board offer because of previous commitments.

The association's housing committee then came up with the idea that the house would make a good community centre. They claim that leaving the house where it is will not hinder board plans for expansion.

Paul Phillips, a member of the committee, said "the board should be responsive to the needs of the community. We should approach them and tell them what we want and of our feelings on this matter."

The committee, formed at the last meeting, also listed their aims which included "being strong enough to stop any development in the area which is not wanted."

They also claim the city planning department will not divulge its plans for the central area of Fernwood.

Community worker Brian Lewis, who tendered his resignation effective Nov. 15, reported that the city parks department has reversed its stand on the matter of Stevenson Park.

The city in August dropped renovations of Stevenson from its Local Initiative Project plans in favor of doing the work under another Ottawa-sponsored program.

After many protests by the community—both by the association and individuals—the parks department returned to its original proposal.

It is expected $66,000 will be spent on renovating the park.

Lewis also urged the association to apply for a Community Resource Organization Program grant which would dovetail with work being done on the Neighborhood Improvement Project work.

C.R.O.P. allows an area to have a person and office to deal with rehabilitation of older homes. Lewis said the funds could be for one or more years.

After a long discussion and some bickering the association made little headway in dealing with NIP and the formation of a committee.

It was decided to ask city co-ordinator Frank Burn send out a flyer in the area covered and that a meeting be held sometime before Nov. 15.

Ottawa, the province and city has agreed to spend $1 million in improving a large part of the city, including the Fernwood area.

Northridge wants to be tied to Royal Oak in developing a community plan, says Mary Szalai, president of the Northridge Community Association.

At a meeting of the membership, it was decided that Northridge has more in common with Royal Oak than with the Strawberry Vale region.

"We just can't take the lead in developing a plan for the Colquitz region — our ties are with Royal Oak and what happens in the area adjacent to use," added Szalai.

The association will be sending a letter to Saanich planning department asking for the change.

Also members are pressing the matter concerning a lot on Vanalman which was excluded from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

A letter will be send to the Capital Region Board demanding to know why the action was taken and that the lot in question be placed in the reserve. It is surrounded by land in the AIR and is located at the corner of Roy Road and Vanalman.

In other business it was decided to form a work party to work on the section of Colquitz Creek which runs through the subdivision.

The department of conservation will be contacted to see that the work does not conflict with the salmon spawning run.

Tickets for the Halloween bonfire are now available at either 648 or 635 Vanalman. The fire will be at Coply park near the creek.

The final obstacle — money — is out of the way and it is hoped construction of the 28 units of the James Bay Co-Operative Housing Association will begin before Christmas.

Spokesman Bill McKechnie says Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has approved the spending of $850,000 for the project at the corner of Montreal and Dallas.

The group has more members than units and all units have been assigned to a member.

Negotiations are now under way with the builder.

A lot of volunteers have come forward to help with this year's Halloween bonfire in Vic West Park, sponsored by the Vic West Community Development Association.

The fire starts at dusk and there will be a fireworks display, free hotdogs, coffee and hot chocolate.

Last year the group served 600 hot dogs and the children drank 450 cups of chocolate.

In other news concerning the area, there will be a meeting Wednesday, Nov. 5, at Vic West Elementary to discuss the Neighborhood Improvement Project report.

New Policies Smelted

The announcement Tuesday of plans to build a copper smelter in the rich Highland Valley west of Kamloops should be welcomed by all British Columbians interested in diversifying the province's economy, encouraging employment and taking control of our resources. A home-grown copper smelter is a long overdue development in B.C., where copper has been mined for three-quarters of a century but was always shipped outside (with the attendant jobs) for refining.

The creation of 350 permanent jobs at Afton Mines Ltd.'s smelter, in a province where one worker in every 10 is unemployed, is the best news in a long time. So is the disclosure by Economic Development and Mines Minister Gary lauk that two other groups of copper mining firms are also discussing the possibility of building their own smelters.

In a way the announcement by Afton and the provincial government, like earlier hints that the NDP administration's Mineral Royalties Act will be overhauled and toned down at the fall session of the legislature, marks a curious ideological coming-of-age on the part of the new Democratic party, which until quite recently strongly resisted any subsidies to private industry. In the words of ex-mines minister Leo Nimsick: "But to appeal to the people of B.C. to give a subsidy or donation to private enterprise I think is wrong."

That was during debate of the repeal of the 1961 Copper Bounty Act, which offered a provincial subsidy of one cent a pound without any strings attached. That's half the subsidy which Afton will get for its smelter, which will apply during its first four years of operation (estimated total subsidy in this period, $3.3 million) but it may be extended. And the old subsidy could go to a maximum of only $2.5 million, and had to be spread over 10 years.

The old hard-line policy of the NDP was to demand an equity share in return for such subsidies. Under the scheme announced by Lauk, all B.C. gets is an "option" to buy five per cent of the smelter. Counting the royalty remissions, the subsidies and the government option, it means B.C. taxpayers will be paying 40 per cent of the bill for building the smelter, but getting just a five per cent share in return. And that's not all the money the provincial government will be pumping into the mining industry. The government's own copper smelter task force in June said there was a smelter capacity in B.C. five times as large as Afton's. Several other smelters could follow, all eligible for the same generous terms. The total copper smelter bill could easily run up to $50 million.

Despite Lauk's fudgy assertions that this 180-degree switch in policy is not a reversal, that the subsidies are in fact just "incentives," the government has very clearly made a quick about-face. The public deserves more from the new mines minister and the premier — who was quick off the mark three years ago to condemn the old cent-a-pound subsidy — than glib explanations that explain nothing. Why has the government changed its mind?

Clearly, the copper mining companies are getting a lot more out of Premier Dave Barrett's anti-business supposedly socialist administration than they ever wheedled out of the ostensible supporters of "corporate welfare" in the old Social Credit regime. Curiouser conversions would be hard to find.

Still, it looks to be a good deal. After a protracted slump, the copper industry is starting to climb out again. Just the same day Lauk and Afton made their betrothal public, the Toronto investment firm of Crang and Ostinguy Inc. predicted higher prices and "more favorable tax policies" from the B.C. government. The stock market knows something the rest of us don't. The company also predicts "gradual, protracted improvement in copper demand and producer prices as world economies recover from the recent recession. The B.C. copper producers in particular are felt to offer greater than usual opportunities for the patient speculative investor."

Closed Doors, Cold Winds

We can see it now. Don Phillips, coat collar high, hands thrust in pockets against the cold wind pouring down Wellington Street, and casting covetous glances at Ottawa's old railway station where the federal-provincial conference is going on.

Why would Social Credit do anything so gauche as sending Don to a conference where he wasn't wanted? An assistant to the prime minister pointed out in a letter to Bill Bennett that the conference was closed. It was up to each individual premier to make up delegations.

What premier in his right mind would ask the opposition to join him at such a meeting especially a premier who might be considering an election? Did Prime Minister Trudeau ask Real Caouette to sit in? It would appear Social Credit has done another awkward thing.

Don can warm his hands on the centennial flame, study the fathers of Confederation statues or gaze morosely at his reflection in Bank Street pawn shop windows. The moral of the story is that travel broadens the horizons but it doesn't necessarily open any doors.

HAROLD GREER

Ten Years Without a Trial!

TORONTO — A man was sent to prison here recently without first having had a trial. He got 10 years for a crime which is not listed or defined in the criminal code of Canada. His sentence was decided by the judge before the judge heard submissions from the man's lawyer.

The judge could have given him one day or one year or 100 years — whatever he thought was fair. He gave him 10 years because the jury had decided he wasn't telling the truth. If the jury had believed him, the judge said, he would have gone to prison for life.

It was all quite, quite legal.

The Canadian bill of rights says no one may be deprived of his liberty "except by due process of law." It also says no law of Canada shall be applied so as to authorize or effect the "arbitrary" imprisonment of any person.

These are fundamental provisions of Canadian justice, going back to habeas corpus and all that. But they do not apply, or at least they do not seem to mean what they say when they are applied, to that curious anomaly in Canadian law known as contempt of court.

That was the crime that got Edward Johnston 10 years in prison.

Defence Witness

He was a defence witness in the trial of two Millhaven penitentiary inmates accused of the murder of another inmate, David Cabana. His testimony was that the two accused did not kill Cabana because he (Johnston) and another prisoner did.

The judge, Mr. Justice Edson Haines, obviously did not believe Johnston and referred several times during the trial to a possible conspiracy by some Millhaven inmates to put up evidence, under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, which might persuade the jury to acquit the two accused.

In the event, however, the jury did not believe Johnston, either, because it convicted the two men.

But Johnston was not charged as a result with perjury or with obstructing the course of justice, or anything like that. His offence was contempt of court — specifically that he refused to say, after being ordered by the judge to answer, who was the man who allegedly helped him to murder Cabana and who was the man who allegedly supplied them with the knives for the deed.

Now if Johnston, as a result of his refusal, had been charged under section 116 of the criminal code, which provides for two years imprisonment for disobeying without lawful excuse a lawful order made by a court of justice, it is possible he could have entered a successful defence.

After all, his invocation of the Canada Evidence Act only meant that his testimony could not be used against him on a subsequent murder charge. It afforded him no protection at all against what his fellow inmates at Millhaven penitentiary would likely do to him if he had named others as having helped him to murder Cabana.

Even accepting that his evidence was a complete fabrication and there were no others, it would be naive to think Johnston could have invented them and named names without paying for it, probably with his life.

MR. JUSTICE HAINES
. . . sentenced Johnston for contempt

In short, it is not stretching matters to say that Johnston had good reason self-preservation itself — for refusing to answer the two questions put to him. Under section 116 of the code, that might have constituted a lawful excuse for not answering. Under section 116, he would at least have got a trial and the right to put up a defence.

But there is nothing in the law as it now stands that required Johnston to be charged under section 116. Contempt of court is a crime in common law and superior courts possess an "inherent and venerable right," as the phrase runs, to punish it summarily — that is, on the spot.

That is what Justice Haines did and all Edward Johnston got by way of trial was the opportunity to confer privately with his lawyer after the judge had ordered him to answer the two questions. All he got by way of pre-sentence argument was, as noted, the opportunity by his lawyer to make submissions to a judge whose mind was already made up.

One can only guess, of course, at what legal advice Johnston received but it was probably to the effect, bearing in mind the roughly analagous sections of the criminal code, that a continued refusal to answer would likely get him an extra year or two in prison. Ten years for contempt is, I believe, quite unprecedented.

It is also, however, quite legal. In contempt matters, a superior court judge has complete discretion, subject to appeal, not only to define the crime but to fit the punishment to it. There are no statutory restrictions.

Scrupulous Regard

A judge is expected, of course, to have "scrupulous regard," to quote Mr. Justice Bora Laskin (now Chief Justice of Canada) in a 1971 contempt case, "for those principles that underlie the administration of justice through law." These include "the principle that no one shall be liable to penalty or punishment without a fair hearing and the principle that he shall not suffer conviction at the hands of another who is both his prosecutor and his judge and the principle that he shall not be judged by one on whom there is a reasonable apprehension of bias."

It would be inappropriate to say, in view of the possibility of an appeal, that these principles were violated in the case of Edward Johnston. It is appropriate, however, to note that Mr. Justice Laskin applied them in the 1971 case and concluded, to any layman's satisfaction, that the accused had been improperly convicted of contempt, but that a majority of the supreme court of Canada took a very narrow legal view of the issue and disagreed with him. The conviction was upheld.

The hard fact is that judges tend to stick together in matters of contempt and reform is not likely to be achieved except by way of legislation.

Controls: Hard Part Begins

OTTAWA — When Jean-Luc Pepin held his first press conference after his appointment as chairman of the anti-inflation board he sounded rather cheerful as he warned that "we will have to push people around."

The next day, when the government introduced in parliament the bill providing teeth for its price and wage control program, it became clear just how much power to push, Pepin and his colleagues will possess. They will be very strong people.

It seemed clear during the press conference that Pepin was excited over his new powers.

Excitement over fresh power may be very human but I am not sure that it is a safe combination, even though Pepin assured us that the pushing of people will be done "more in" sadness than in anger."

In this sort of situation it obviously is much better to be a pusher rather than one of those being pushed. The money is good.

Pepin refused to disclose his salary but from other government sources it was learned that he will get $60,000 a year for his role. Mrs. Plumptre will be paid $50,000.

Recruitment Campaign

A recruitment campaign already has started to enlist a $50,000-a-year man or woman as executive director of the board. A couple of other senior people are sought at $35,000 each.

A quarter of a million for five bodies is reasonably impressive.

We had unquestionably reached a state of serious danger in the economy. It demanded action and there is so much at stake that any one in his right mind must hope this program is a success.

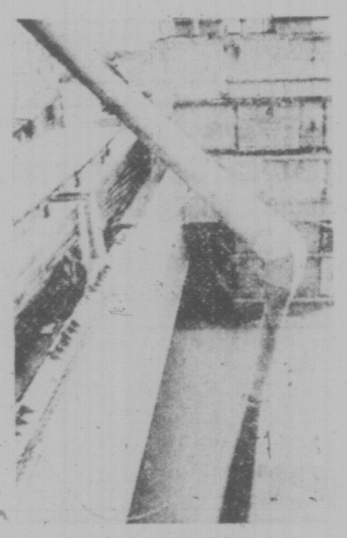
But no one should forget that it brings real encroachments on freedoms we have traditionally enjoyed. The encroachments will be quite as real — although entirely different from — as those under the War Measures Act five years ago and they will last a lot longer.

We are witnessing a very large-scale extension of state involvement in the economy. It is no longer surprising that Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, could remark just before the controls were unveiled that he found the prospect "frightening."

No one yet has calculated the full extent to which all this will go. These controls do not affect merely incomes and prices. They will affect investment in industry very directly. Dividends, for instance, are to be restricted. To win labor support for the program is surely essential. But it inevitably must bear an investment. There is an implication in this that has not even been mentioned.

During the Second World War such controls could be made to work effectively but for a cogent reason — they are backed up by foreign exchange controls. People could not legally switch investment funds to other countries in those days.

Now, however, we have no foreign exchange controls but we do have a new control on the level of earnings permitted on investment. If that remains at about New York levels, there is no reason why much that is dramatic would follow. If it falls below New York levels,



EXPORT GRAIN LOADING
. . . crunch comes in trade balance

however, it invites an outward flow of capital from this country.

A similar problem exists with the pricing policy for exports. Export producers will be expected to sell abroad at world prices but inside the country at controlled ones.

As soon as these begin to diverge seriously — as they inevitably must if the Canadian program is successful — a problem will have to be faced. That will involve the provision of adequate supplies for the Canadian market, sold below the level at which the same product could be exported.

In the case of petroleum and its two-price system, strict export controls have been used to solve the problem. In the case of wheat, where there also is a two-price system, sales are the monopoly of a state corporation, the wheat board, so the flow can be regulated easily enough.

If in future the question comes to involve some essential product such as copper, where supply is restricted to a few large firms, government arm-twisting would probably be sufficient to guarantee supply to the domestic market.

The problem will be far more difficult, however, in any case where there are a large number of producers. As soon as the government's program begins to have an effect, if it does, there is likely to be a serious need for export controls.

There is, of course, one other possibility. Before long this country's balance of payments problems are going to be severe, unless some way is found of reversing current trends. We are quite likely to be imposing an austere regime on the domestic market in order to export everything possible.

This latter prospect is the most pressing reason why the government should not be encouraging maximum consumption of petroleum products through subsidized gasoline prices. Much of our increasingly serious balance of payments situation is related to petroleum imports.

Bad Example

The government now claims that it intends to take serious steps to conserve energy but its own example is so bad that it is difficult to take that assurance seriously.

This anti-inflation program was well along in the course of being worked out when the government threw its Mirabel extravaganza, spending $250,000 for the four-day entertainment, and an unknown further sum — put as high as $400,000 in some serious estimates — flying in airline presidents from Europe, staging military fly pasts over the airport and so on.

The entirely wasteful consumption of kerosene and jet fuel was very high. It is defended as "promotion" and "marketing" but it is precisely the sort of thing the government should have cancelled the instant it decided on this anti-inflation program.

The government has decided that "we will have to push people around" and that is real enough. It has not even begun to think seriously about its own example except in terms of the size of the public service. That is admittedly something but it is far from being adequate.

Monarchy Medieval

In reference to the monarchy, in my opinion it is just a medieval hanger on that should have been laid to rest with all the other dreadful things of that era.

It is just a social pecking order and the sooner the British people realize the expense it is to them to keep these parasites living in high style the more money they will have for the aged and the ill.— P.G., Victoria.

Double Standard?

It was reported in the Vancouver Province that Dave Barrett took his cabinet on tour of the province, providing meals for the public at taxpayers' expense as an inducement for people to attend his meetings. He was violating the intent of some of the provincial government's own legislation.

Section 135 of the Municipal Act, which governs the conduct of civic officials states:

"Every candidate at an election who corruptly, by himself or by or with any person, or by any other ways or means on his behalf, at any time either before, during, or after any election, directly or indirectly, gives or provides, or causes to be given or provided, or is accessory to the giving or providing, or pays, wholly or in part, any expenses incurred for any meat, drink, entertainment, or provision, to or for any person, in order to be elected, or for being elected, or for the purpose of corruptly influencing such person, or any other person, to give or refrain from giving his vote at the election or on account of such person having voted or refrained from voting, or being about to vote or refrain from voting, at the election, is guilty of the offence of treating, and is, on summary conviction, liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars, and every voter who corruptly accepts or takes any such meat, drink, entertainment, or provision is prohibited from voting at the election, and his vote, if given shall be utterly void and of no effect."

The offence of "treating" is considered by the provincial government to be so serious that it has decreed that an offender can be fined up to $100 upon conviction and that the right to vote be denied to anyone who accepts such a treat.

It seems we now have two sets of standards of political behavior in British Columbia — the rule for the average citizen participating in municipal government, and the exception of the rule for the premier of British Columbia and his followers. — Constance E. Armour, 682 Granderson Road.

LONDON — Sir Charles Johnston, who retires from office as lord mayor of London on Nov. 9, is the first of 726 men who have held that office who can boast that he has not given or attended a single public dinner during the whole year of his incumbency. "That is, of course, due to the war, for the war has changed all our preconceived notions of what a London mayoralty means. We have been a serious people the past year, with no time for ceremonials and an eye single to the grim business before us."

Spain Set For Second Civil War?

By WALTER SCHWARZ
Manchester Guardian

Prince Juan Carlos goes out to meet the people

Another Spanish civil war — with all its frightening implications of foreign involvement — now looks more likely. That is the consensus of opinion here among liberals, the semi undergound opposition, and even among Fascists who pride themselves on their clear-sightedness.

In a ceremonial sense the war has already started. Its declaration was the hasty passage last August of the anti-terrorist law, prescribing procedures that amount in law to official lynching. The first blood has now been shed on each side. The first five urban guerrillas were executed a fortnight ago and in Madrid the following Wednesday four policemen guarding banks were shot down, apparently with no other object than vengeance for the execution. More executions are now awaited daily and three more police have been killed in the north.

Rapid Polarization

The shooting on each side is done by a small minority of Spaniards. One opposition leader estimated that all the militants of ETA, the Basque guerrilla group, and FRAP, the extreme left-wing anti-Fascists, plus all their more or less militant supporters could not conceivably number more than 20,000. And he calculated that all the dedicated Fascists ready at this moment to shoot, could hardly number more than another 20,000.

But what alarms the people now is the pace at which militant support grows on each side, and the rapid polarisation into Fascist and anti-Fascists. After the executions there were 100,000 Basques on strike, defying a penalty of 12 years imprisonment under the new law for "showing sympathy for terrorists"; on the other side, 150,000 people in Madrid's Orient Square, shouting: "Death to ETA — long live Franco."

Until this month a scenario for a peaceful change after Franco's death or resignation was ready and widely accepted by government and opposition alike. It was that Franco's designated heir, the young Prince Juan Carlos, would assume power and initiate a dialogue with the Opposition which would result in a transition to a generally and internationally accepted form of democacy.

FRANCO

But Prince Juan Carlos appeared on the Palace balcony at Franco's side. He said nothing, and his silence irretrievably commits him on one side in the coming struggle.

"The Prince's prospects are now down to almost zero," said a shrewd and normally cautious foreign diplomat. Up to now the non-Communist opposition grouped in the so-called "democratic platform" has pinned its hopes on the Prince while the Communists and their allies in the "democratic junta" have referred to his more outspokenly democratic father, the legitimate heir, Prince Don Juan.

If not the Prince, who? His father, in exile, seemed to put his hat in the ring for a succession last June when he assembled leading opposition groups in a patriotic meeting at his home in Portugal. Since then, he has continued assiduously to entertain opposition leaders from Spain. Several of these who I saw in Madrid reported that he was "disgusted" at his son's silence in the face of what was happening and determined to renew his efforts to make himself available as an alternative.

But what chance has Don Juan? He lacks official blessing. He has committed himself to democracy and thus confronts the hard core of Fascists. Here again, the battle lines are drawn.

That leaves only the army. Opposition groups of all shades agreed here that the army has become deeply worried and that colonels, brigadiers, and generals have begun anxious political soundings to reconnoitre the post-Franco period.

Can the generals step in and provide a peaceful transition? Senor Antonio Garcia Lopez, leader of the small Social Democrat Group among the opposition, thinks it can and will. "You cannot compare it to the Portuguese army. This is an army that shoots. It is disciplined and united. Once it makes up its mind to do a thing, it can do it."

But other opposition leaders are less sanguine about the army. "Once it comes out of its baracks, it won't be so easy to make it go back, and we could be in a Portuguese situation," said a leader of the important Christian Democratic Group. Senor Fernando Alvarez Demiramda.

But all these politicians in the wings claim to have evidence that the army generals have accepted the need for democratic change. But how democratic? "The generals are still determindedly anti-Communist," said one group leader, claiming that this factor has scotched recent efforts for a fusion between the "democratic platform" (the anti-Communist parties, dominated by the Christian Democrats and the traditional Socialists) and the Junta (dominated by the Communists and the radical Socialists).

The role of honest broker between the army and the moderate opposition is being attempted by a middle group, popularly known as the "civilised Right." This group, which was not allowed to form itself into a political "association" under the new laws, launched a private company instead, known as Fedica. One of its leaders, the Count of Motrico, a former Ambassador in Washington, is understood to have had contact with the army.

Army on Sidelines

"We are in a pre-revolutionary situation," said Professor Thierno Galvan, the distinguished sociologist who is the theoretician of the Popular Socialist Party, the radical Socialists who are inside the Junta. All the elements are there: an economic crisis, a thoroughly weak regime, and an army on the sidelines wondering where and when to act."

A situation like that is not altogether new to Spain. What is new is the alarming polarisation situation of the last few weeks. Senior Arias, the Prime Ministers, associated himself 18 months ago with liberalization, thereby bidding for foreign sympathy and EEC support. Now, almost overnight, he has abandoned his experiment. Liberalism is dead. Most political observers in Madid agree that Arias will now move farther to the Right, or be replaced by someone else who will.

Senor Felipe Gonzales, head of PSORE, the traditional Socialist Party, thinks the Arias govenment is now likely to be replaced by one with an even harder line. This too, is a common view and many people think the time has come for a hard liner like Senor Solis, Minister in Charge of the Moviemento, to take over and try to found a new ideology of after-Francoism on the rough model of Gaullism.

But, as the Right gathers steam, so also does the Left. "Day by day we are seeing the politicisation of the workers," said Professor Galvan. He meant that every new execution brings untold new recruits for the revolution.

Which scenario will be inactive? Nobody has had a precise answer for years. Now at least almost everyone agrees that the old hope that Franco might somehow "go" (and over voluntarily) is dead. He will not leave until he dies — or withers away like Salazar.

Hochelaga Message Should Scare Liberals

By DOUGLAS FISHER

JUNEAU

LALONDE
. . . loses first test

OTTAWA — Let's put aside the over-riding national importance of the anti-inflation program of the Trudeau government. Let's look at its simply in partisan terms, or as the politicians say (usually scornfully) in terms of "just politics."

The Hochelaga by-election result is a good starting place. The rejection of Pierre Juneau, the election of a nice, decent constituency Tory, was a devastating blow to the Liberals. This has nothing to do with loss of a man of Juneau's capabilities, excellent as he may have proved in the ministry.

Hochelaga is not only a traditional federal Liberal stronghold. It has become on the provincial scene a section where the Parti Quebecois of Rene Levesque has strength. A shiver must have run through Bourassa.

As for Trudeau and his recently-appointed Quebec chief, Marc Lalonde, the defeat is more chilling than a percentage drop of points in the national Gallup Poll. Even with 140 House of Commons seats the Liberals begin to look terribly vulnerable if they are threatened with losses in the "heart-land" in the next election, and that election will happen, at the end of the provisional timeframe set for the anti-inflation program — three years.

The message of Hochelaga could be put this way. If a federal election had been held the same night the Trudeau government would have been defeated.

Again, viewing the program politically, there's no question that it was suddenly brought forward because messages from other places than Montreal and Quebec were getting through the political antenna of the Trudeau ministry and Grit political advisers like Senator Davey and Jim Coutts; the prime minister's chief of staff.

Either the government moved with dispatch or its reputation would sink so low that it could never be recovered, even for an election two and half or three years away.

This message was coming much more from English Canada than from Quebec, and particularly from the corporate community and from the university-educated middle-class constituency of Ontario which Trudeau had regained in strength in the 1974 election.

One minister has told me that in the final discussion in cabinet before the decision was taken to plunge ahead with the anti-inflation program, the PM warned the ministers to this effect: "Remember this. Nothing we've ever tackled is as controversial as this. There's no way we can come out a winner across the board with this program. It steps on too many toes. It challenges too many interest groups. Don't expect it to be popular. It won't make us more beloved."

A Conservative has remarked about the new program: "In time, when they've stolen enough of our rope, they'll hang themselves."

That may be, but unlike Ed Broadbent and the federal NDP, Bob Stanfield and the Tories are going along with the program in principle, in the cause of the national weal.

But the program already has such confusions and so many critical or negative reactions that the official Opposition can vote for the measures but retain a steady and mounting role as critics for the inequities and bad administration which are certain to emerge.

Broadbent, as I see it, decided to react harshly at once, largely out of experience with the October Crisis of 1970. The Trudeau handling of that crisis evoked an enormous support across the country. It seemed like political suicide at the time when Tommy Douglas and the NDP caucus belittled the implementation of the War Measures Act. In time the pendulum swung and the NDP position then is now listed as an item on its honor roll of contributions to the integrity of our politics.

The Broadbent reaction, though it may be unpopular in the short run, down the road of the months ahead as the program raises discontent on all sides the NDP will be in an excellent tactical position in terms of partisan warfare.

What happened last week, in brute partisan terms, is that a government has staked its renewed mandate far ahead in the 1978 general election on a most difficult program. Within a day it got the message from Hochelaga that even without the program it was in serious trouble.

Life in the Shadows

RUSSELL BAKER

The 11:30 movie on television begins with three bank robbers shooting two guards to death. It is ho-hum stuff. Fast shotgun blasts to head and chest.

Not well photographed, either. There is none of the good peach flesh tone and strong background green that set off the blood so well in "Nashville" when the killer shot the girl singer to death on the steps of that phony Partheron. We saw that just the other night.

Last night we saw "The Day of the Locust," in which a mob tears a man to pieces with its fingers. It reminded me of "Equus," a play we saw not long ago, in which a boy blinded six horses by driving a spike into their eyes.

We took a taxi home from the theatre instead of walking because we had read in the paper that day about a man who was shot to death by two gunmen just 200 yards from our house; and we felt that the blinding of horses was enough stimulation for one evening. After the neighborhood shooting, the killers threw the body into the trunk of a stolen car and abandoned it near a hospital, but although they left a foot sticking out, nobody noticed it for two hours.

On the 11:30 movie there has been no gunfire for 10 minutes and I am browsing throught the paper. I read about a young man who shot his father yesterday, was released on bail, went home and stabbed his mother to death.

A commercial for "Three Days of the Condor" interrupts the bank-killers movie. Robert Redford is screaming that everybody he knows is trying to kill him. Gunfire ends the commercial with a blast.

I switch channels, hoping to catch some film clips of the funeral of the policemen who were shot to death by a drug pusher or some slow motion shots of the latest attempt to assassinate the President, but the news is over for the night. The best bet is an old 1943 film in which some Americans are bombing a studio mock-up of Germany.

I lie on the bed and open a new novel, flipping the pages to a detailed description of a rape, which turns out to be almost exactly like every other rape in all the other new novels I have flipped through for the past two years.

I decide to walk to the corner and buy the early editions of the next morning's papers to see if anybody interesting has been kidnapped. A man I know, a real-estate owner in the Bronx, is dickering with a 10-year-old boy to burn down some houses for him because he can no longer afford to pay the taxes on them. The boy wants two bottles of sniffing glue for doing the job; my acquaintance bargains him down to one bottle of glue and 15 cents cash.

We buy the papers together and my acquaintance asked if I know anybody who can get him some cobra venom or strychnine the government has been storing for clandestine murders.

I tell him no and ask if he knows of any movies in which I can see a woman's face bloodied by a man's fist, and he says, sure, don't miss "Farewell, My Lovely."

The papers have good news — the government has made more money than ever before from selling guns around the world. And bad news — several hundred people are expected to be killed by cars on the Columbus Day weekend.

Way in the back of the paper I read that E. Howard Hunt has denied reports that he told friends somebody in the White House had ordered Jack Anderson killed for reporting news that was bad for national security.

At home, an old Air Force buddy who flies for SAC calls up and apologizes about the late hour, but he has just got back from a routine flight carrying nuclear bombs.

He has run into an old mutual friend, and — would anybody in the old gang ever believe it? — this old pal is one of the guys the government sent to try to persuade the Mafia to take on the job of killing Fidel Castro.

I ring off quickly because of a loud explosion up the street caused by some youthful idealists dynamiting an office building to protest injustice, and turn on the television again. Robert Redford is screaming that everybody he knows is trying to kill him and then a clergyman's voice does the sign-off prayer for peace on earth and serenity in the hereafter, and I put out the bedroom lights; search carefully for poisonous vipers, then lie down with my shotgun behind the livingroom sofa and watch the windows for shadows until I drop off to sleep.

Realty Sale on Sunday Supported by Chamber

Real estate sales should be exempt from the never-on-Sunday bylaw being contemplated by Victoria city council, Chamber of Commerce directors were told Wednesday.

Chamber president Jack Hutchins was referring to the current discussion of Sunday closing legislation, noting the originally drafted bylaw and comments of aldermen since then are "quite a way apart."

"Council don't know what they want; whose toes to tread on," he said at a luncheon meeting in Strathcona Hotel.

The chamber should push for the exemption of real estate selling from the list of activities the bylaw hopes to control because, Hutchins said, Sunday is the only day a working couple or prospective husband and wife can go out looking at houses.

Directors agreed to protest to Canadian National Railways a proposed surcharge on foreign passengers landing at Victoria on cruise ships, which Terry Farmer, of the Visitors Information Centre, said would add 90 per cent to the cost of docking.

Cruise liners use CN facilities at Ogden Point docks, which the Crown corporation claims now cost more to provide. Farmer said this comes to about $3,500 per ship above the former costs charged to shipping companies.

Harbor committee chairman John Challinor said such an increase is unjustified and suggested CN should adhere to the federal guidelines on prices and incomes.

Farmer said the surcharge should be applied only to those passengers who join or leave the ships at Victoria, an amount the companies could handle.

Challinor said his committee hopes to have ready soon a model of the Inner Harbor to assist in discussing its future development. It hoped also to have discussion with the provincial government, one of the largest property owners on the waterfront.

Talks have been held with city planning department and the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Hutchins said in regard to a recent protest to Canadian Pacific Railway over its cancellation of Victoria-Seattle rail barge service that regional vice-president L.R. Smith had replied the service was not economic.

Smith, of Vancouver, said alternative CP Rail service is available through up-Island routing to the mainland.

But Hutchins pointed out this means is much longer, requiring interconnection on the prairies, and more expensive for shippers.

The reply, "as far as they are concerned, closed the issue," Hutchins said.

A Chamber of Commerce plan to provide its members in major centres with contingency mail service during the strike of postal workers will not go into effect until the large cities join the scheme, reported chamber manager Brian Small.

Although a number of urban chambers had agreed to the bulk shipment of mail on behalf of its members, the key cities of Vancouver and Montreal are among those which are still uncommitted because of the problem of logistics.

"It is not the easiest thing to work out when you have to consider several hundred thousand pieces of mail a day," Small remarked.

More than 700 have registered for the community courses offered at the James Bay Community School.

Vice-principal Janey Allan said today there was "a fantastic response" to the vegetarian cooking course Thursday night.

While this course and 15 others are filled, there is still room in a majority of the courses for more registrations, especially the family film night Thursdays when four full length classic films will be shown.

Cost is $5 per family for the series.

"We want to pre-sell the series just to cover costs," added Allan.

Ferry Cuts Causing Line-Ups, May Be Changed, Says Liden

Problems have arisen already in B.C. Ferries' new winter schedule and Transport Minister Carl Liden said Wednesday the program may have to be changed.

The new system of reduced sailings started Monday and there were lineups and overloads immediately, especially on morning runs. Ferries are running on a two-hour basis in the morning on weekdays and Liden said there appears to be serious problems despite widespread advertising of the new service.

The major problem is the lack of an 8 a.m. ferry, since there have been overloads on the first daily sailing at 7 a.m. and passengers have to wait until 9 a.m. for the next run.

Liden said he has asked ferries general manager Charles Gallagher to report on the situation and changes may be made almost immediately.

The ferries have always operated on a reduced schedule during the winter but last year the government tried to run an hourly service throughout the year and was unsuccessful.

Because so many ferries were running empty during the winter and because the government hoped to eliminate employee ovrtime, the new winter schedule was brought in with hourly service at peak periods and reduced sailings the rest of the week.

"We thought by keeping hourly service at the heavy times — on the weekends and during the afternoons — and dropping ferries on the slack times we could still provide good service," said Liden.

"But we said from the start we would keep it under close examination," he added.

The problems may have arisen, however, because people are not aware of the new schedule and once the public is fully aware there will be fewer line-ups, he said.

Also the Sandown Park racing season began last week and may have caused an unusual increase in ferry traffic.

The new schedule eliminates six ferries during the week, from Monday to Thursday — the 8 a.m., 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

On Friday and Sunday the 8 a.m., 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m. sailings are eliminated and on Saturday the noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m., 6 p.m., 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. runs are cancelled.

Liden said the problem with reinstating some of the morning runs is that the ferry authority is trying to cut down on overtime and if one run is added another may have to be eliminated in the evening.

The new schedule was supposed to save the government $1.8 million in the face of a $25 million loss predicted for this year throughout the ferry service.

Ferry officials had hoped with the new schedules more commercial enterprises would start to use the early-morning CPR run from Swartz Bay to Vancouver harbor as an alternative and relief for the government ferries.

AD POWER 'OVERRATED'

TORONTO (CP) — George Sinclair, chairman of MacLaren Advertising Ltd. of Toronto, said Wednesday that the pursuasiveness of advertising is highly overrated by both its advocates and critics.

He said the advertising business has a responsibility to "tell the world the truth at long last . . . that advertising has no real power, and it is effective persuasion within very narrow limits."

Sinclair made the comments in a speech to the annual meeting of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, an international organization of publishers and advertisers that polices the circulation claims of publications.

Advertising will never make a person switch to a brand of beer he does not like, he said. However, it might lead a person who already uses a product to try another brand — once.

"But our irresponsibility in letting the world believe otherwise is the cause of many of our industry's woes," Sinclair said. "We ourselves have inflamed the attacks upon our business."

Politicians, bureaucrats and consumer spokesmen who find masses of people not responding to their own message "turn on the force which they believe is leading society away from them."

"They believe that advertising is the simple powerful magic which is leading an otherwise good people down the garden path."

Sinclair cited the incidence of cigarette smoking in the United States — which has increased since broadcast advertising was banned — as evidence to the contrary.

And when beer sales of the brewery that sponsors hockey games increase at playoff time, he said, it is because that brewery is gaining from other breweries, not because it is increasing the popularity of drinking beer.

Advertising "will not effect any basic change in human behavior," he said. "But how easy we have made it for the politician to assume otherwise by our traditional exaggeration of the power of advertising."

Sadat to Speak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Egyptian president Anwar Sadat will address a joint session of the U.S. congress next Wednesday, and Israeli president Yitzhak Rabin will be granted the same courtesy "within the next few weeks."

GABRIOLA SHELVED

B.C.'s new transport minister says he is not anxious to push ahead with the proposed Gabriola Island ferry terminal.

Carl Liden said there are serious problems with the proposed site and as far as he is concerned "the issue has been moved to the back burner."

The minister said Wednesday he still wants to move ahead with a new terminal on the Lower Mainland side and hopes to see progress soon on the proposed Iona Island site.

For more than a year the government has been studying a new ferry route which would see a bridge to Gabriola from Vancouver Island, a highway across Gabriola to a terminal which would connect with a site in the Delta region of the Lower Mainland.

The new route would replace the Departure Bay - Horseshoe Bay run and cut the sailing time nearly in half.

But Gabriola residents, environmental groups and the governments own Islands' Trust have opposed the route because of the destruction it would cause on the Gulf island.

"There are many problems associated with the Gabriola site although there are significant advantages from the marine end," said Liden.

"I'm more interested in going ahead with the Iona Island site to relieve the pressure on Horseshoe Bay," he said.

Liden said the Iona site would still shorten the route from Vancouver Island, even if the Gabriola terminal is abandoned, and traffic from the ferry could easily be channeled into arteries flowing into Vancouver from the Delta area.

A major new highway is being built on the Upper Levels to Horseshoe Bay but Liden said the highway will still be needed to serve Squamish and the Sunshine coast.

Sask. Wheat Pool Accepts Some Rail Line Closings

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool indicated Wednesday that it is willing to accept abandonment of a sixth of all rail lines in the province as part of a comprehensive rationalization of the Prairie grain-handling networks.

In a brief to the Federal Commission on grain-handling and transportation, the pool listed 1,400 miles of branch rail lines that it considered expendable.

The brief suggested, however, that 2,100 miles more of tracks also in question be retained and upgraded, and that the railways improve their efficiency through joint running rights, exchange of lines and other means.

In addition to the 3,500 miles of Saskatchewan railway being studied by the commission, about 5,600 miles of major rail lines already have been guaranteed for 25 years by the federal government.

In giving partial support to railway arguments that some branch lines have too small a volume of grain traffic to be economic, the pool also said it is rationalizing its own system of grain elevators and reducing the number of delivery points by almost half.

The brief said the pool, which operates the largest country elevator system in Canada, now has elevators at about 700 Saskatchewan points, down from 1,000 a few years ago.

"The average hauling distance is about six to eight miles. With the improved road system and larger farm trucks, an average delivery distance of 15 miles may not be unreasonable, but we think the maximum hauling distance should not be more than 25 miles."

"Based on these guidelines, we think a network of 350 to 400 delivery points would provide a satisfactory level of service to grain producers in Saskatchewan."

Meanwhile the pool opposed railway proposals that the statutory limits on freight rates for export grain be removed or raised.

Statutory rates should be maintained, with various forms of government subsidies to compensate the railways for any losses in carrying grain, it said.

Toronto Still Indecisive

Analysts said mixed price trends indicated that the market was caught between selective buying following recent sharp declines and a continuation of investor concern about the federal government's wage and price controls.

They said uncertainty about how the anti-inflation program will affect corporate dividends continued to exert downward pressure on stock prices.

Volume by 2 p.m. was one million shares, down from 1.27 million Wednesday. Losses outnumbered gains 197 to 132 with 189 issues unchanged.

Price Co., which reported lower nine-month earnings, fell 1⅜ to $14⅞, Algoma Steel Corp. ¾ to $25¼, Trizec ⅜ to $13¾, Ford Motor of Canada ⅝ to $78 and Dupont

Guidelines Nudging Investors Into American Investments

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Stock brokers are quietly shifting their clients into U.S. shares as a result of wage and price guidelines that freeze dividends of Canadian issues.

They are taking advantage of an unusual see-saw effect that has the Dow Jones index rising as the industrial index in Toronto falls.

The TSE index appears to be heading for its lowest week ending level since January. The previous low point was last Friday when the index lost 3.97 during the week following Trudeau's announcement and closed at 173.1.

Meanwhile the U.S. market was moving strongly.

The Dow Jones Index rose 8 points to close at 832.18 last week and has jumped another 17 points in the first three days of this week to close at 848.57 Wednesday.

In Toronto, investment houses were suggesting the Canadian market could be weak for three to six months as a result of the freeze on dividends and the price controls that would limit profits.

Some exceptions might be Canadian utilities, pipelines, real estate and banks.

Stocks losing the most on the Canadian market were steels, merchandising and construction companies. Wage and price guidelines are mandatory for all construction firms with 20 employees or more.

The action during the past seven trading days since Trudeau's announcement represents one of the rare occasions when the Toronto market falls while the U.S. market rises.

While prices are falling on the Toronto exchange, volume has been light so temporary upswings are expected but the trend is expected to continue down, at least for the next two or three weeks.

Bell Canada

Bell Canada has announced its net earnings for the nine-month period ending Sept. 30 were $187.7 million of $4.39 a share compared with $171.5 million or $4.29 a share for the corresponding period last year.

The earnings reported for 1974 have been restated to reflect a temporary ten-per-cent federal surtax imposed last year on non-manufacturing profits.

B.C. Tree Fruits

B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd. of Kelowna reports sale of $42.4 million for the 1974-75 crop year, approximately nine per cent below the previous year.

After expenses, $38.7 million was available for distribution. The company is owned by the Fruit Growers' Association. The year-end was May 31.

With B.C. costs "well above" those of the state of Washington, the B.C. industry must move towards greater mechanization, said Nigel C. Taylor, President of B.C. Tree Fruits.

Imports of produce are growing, he noted, and "our industry must face this challenge or be prepared to lose out to imports."

Another grower owned company, Sun-Rype Products Ltd., had sales of $15.4 million, a 19.2 per cent increase over the previous year. Sun-Rype's year end is July 26.

A total of $2.7 million was paid for 24,153 tons of apples, for an average of $109.82 a ton.

Behavior Pledge Frees Indians

GOLD RIVER — Charges of obstructing a public highway, laid against 18 Indians after a six-day roadblock in July, have been stayed in court after the Indians signed good behavior documents.

The 18 pleaded not guilty to the Criminal Code charges that they interfered with the lawful use of property and obstructed a highway between July 14 and July 20.

Prosecutor Ralph Hutchinson of Nanaimo made the request for the stay of proceedings after negotiations between himself and defence lawyers Marguerite Jackson and Peter Leask of Vancouver.

The Mowahchat Indian band set up the roadblock in July claiming that the road from Gold River to the Tahsis Co. pulp mill outside of town, cut across their reserve land.

The documents signed by the 18 Indians promise they will keep the peace and be of good behavior.

A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Christopher Saxey who was charged with the same offences, but failed to appear in court.

Judge Anthony Sarich of Campbell River, the presiding judge in the trial which started Monday, said he was glad good sense prevailed.

Mowahchat Chief Ambrose Maquinna said his band had proven its point and he hoped negotiations would start soon with the provincial government on the whole question of Indian lands.

During the blockade there was confusion as to whether the land where the roadblock was set up was public or reserve land. RCMP moved in on the sixth day of the blockade and removed the protesters.

A test case in a similar charge against a Mount Currie Indian was dropped Tuesday and crown prosecutor David Winkler said he would likely ask that charges against 52 other Mount Currie Indians also be dismissed.

Winkler told Judge C. L. Walker negotiations were being conducted "respect to the subject of the blockade."

A total of 53 Indians were arrested after RCMP cleared out a roadblock which had been set up for one month.

Accountant Plans to Enter Saanich Aldermanic Race

David Paterson of 1628 Longacre Drive has filed papers as a candidate for a two-year term on council.

"I want to get in and help Saanich," Paterson said today, "It's (financing) an over-all problem. In governments they set a budget and then go to the taxpayers, the endless pot, and the taxpayers have no defence. Government spending can be controlled in a better way."

Paterson says, like any other business, governments should set a budget based on income.

Paterson is married with an eight-month-old son.

The filing deadline for the Nov. 15 general election is Monday and incumbents Sandy Noel, Joe Bourque and Fred Severson have announced they intend to run. Incumbent Bill Campbell says he will make his decision known Monday.

Candidates for mayor are incumbent Ed Lum, former alderman Mel Couvelier and newcomer Jim Maxwell.

Council decided Wednesday that the deadline for filing papers for the byelection, to be held on the same date, for the one-year term available through the resignation of Couvelier, will be extended to Friday, Oct. 31. Lawyer E. Maurice Johnson has announced he will be a candidate for the one-year term.

Sierra Club Proposes Tree Farm 'Adjustment'

The Sierra Club of Victoria today recommended readjustment of boundaries of public lands leased to multi-national companies.

In a submission to the Royal Commission on Forest Resources (see other stories on, Page 4), director Eve Howden said when tree farm licences come up for renewal boundaries should be readjusted to account for regional stability and alternative resource uses.

"The boundaries of these tenures don't make sense," she said. "We feel the present tenure system is contrary to sound resources planning."

As an example, she said, the tenures were not geared or planned to ensure economic stability to various communities in B.C.

Nor did the tenure system ensure protection for other resources, such as fisheries and wildlife.

She noted that nowhere is public disenchantment and disillusionment more pronounced than with provincial forests.

She attributed this to two causes. First, the "dismal record" of past management and secondly an increasing demand for more recreational land, better management of fish and wildlife and a more rational approach to the environment.

Howden observed that commitment of public forest lands, especially on Vancouver Island, occurred at a time when there was little concern for fisheries, wildlife, water and recreational values.

"So we suggest that some reallocations are necessary in light of increased public demands for protection of these resources," she said.

She admitted reallocation could cause economic hardships, but said this could be avoided.

"We feel there are innumerable possibilities to produce more wood than is being grown today. At the same time substantial acreage of forests could be withdrawn from present tenures."

To make up for land withdrawn from large tree farms, she said integrated companies could cut down on the amount of wood wasted.

As an example, she claimed in dump-to-mill transportation of timber, there is a loss equivalent to a flat boom of logs 100 miles long, every year.

Barrett To Open Centre

Premier Dave Barrett will do the honors at the official opening of Oak Bay's new recreation centre on Friday evening.

The 7:30 opening will be attended by 250 invited guests.

The $3.74 million centre will be open for public viewing from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. on Saturday. On Sunday the pubic will be welcome from 1 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m.

Students of schools in the area have been given special passes which will allow them to enjoy free skating and swimming at the centre on Saturday and Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. the senior citizens' orchestra from Oak Bay's senior citizens centre, will provide a musical background in the centre's lounge.

Capital costs of the centre to Oak Bay residents is $2 million, $1 million having been made available through the provincial government's Provincial Recreational Facilities Fund and a further $700,000 through the federal government's winter works program.

The centre opens for business on Monday with an early bird swim session at 7:30 a.m. and other sessions at 8:30 a.m.

Study Knocks Record System At Sundance

Sundance school, Greater Victoria's less-structured alternative school experiment, has been criticized for failing to keep traditional records on student achievement.

A special evaluation team report prepared for the Greater Victoria school board says there is a "noticeable lack of significant data" on student progress.

The team, which also evaluated the board's more structured alternative school, Sentinel, was headed by board assistant superintendent of instruction Glenn Wall.

It says that the objectives of both schools have "for the most part been met" and Sundance appeared highly successful.

Started in September, 1973, when 50 parents camped on the school grounds overnight to register their children, Sundance was difficult to evaluate, the team said.

Because of the school's philosophy—to develop a positive and realistic self-concept in children — reporting student progress is not viewed as being too important by parents.

"It does, however, make it most difficult to evaluate the achievement of students, particularly in mathematics and language when no systematic records are maintained," says the report.

Students at the Quadra street school—enrolment is 116 this year with a waiting list of 55—range from kindergarten age to Grade 7 and are divided into five family groupings, removing grade divisions.

The team suggests the school maintain specific records of student progress, especially in the basic skills.

"Similarly there does not appear to be sufficient marking of students' work to ensure that a reinforcement of errors is not allowed to continue," the report says.

"Because of a desire on the part of staff to create positive non-threatening learning situations, at no time are students compelled to get down to work.

The team feels that a child has to be highly motivated in order to succeed academically at Sundance where "such a permissive environment causes some students to be unable to cope with this freedom and are probably wasting time."

A survey of parents, however, indicates they are extemely pleased with the school.

And the team recommends that because Sundance is an experimental alternative school, it should receive more than the basic supply grants than other schools, especially since it emphasizes individualized instruction.

In the case of Sentinel, the school regulations — "You are not permitted to chew gum at school or in transit to or from school" — indicate the traditional approach to learning.

Sentinel, 3861 Cedar Hill, offers Grade 3 to Grade 7 instruction to 120 students. There is a waiting list of 60.

"It is the team's opinion that the satisfaction with Sentinel is because of its structured approach, its emphasis on classroom discipline, courtesy and respect and its stress on the fundamental basic skills in reading, writing and computation."

The team says that the study program is no different from that of other schools, but the consistency with which students are disciplined, "the expectations made of them as far as getting down to work is concerned and the stress on teacher directed learning" does provide an alternative.

Parents, the report says, are prepared to send their children great distances to the school and that indicates a steady demand.

"They will be most unhappy if for any reason it is decided to discontinue it."

The school no longer has a large student population which could be described as academically inclined but has attracted students in need of learning assistance and or a disciplinary approach.

Instead of a careful screening approach initially adopted, students are referred to Sentinel by neighborhood school principals and vacancies are also filled by names appearing on top of the waiting list.

The report is being studied by school board trustees.

Statuesque, but Frail

The statue of the Goddess of Mezcal Mayahuel was officially presented to the city of Victoria at noon today in the foyer of city hall.

Life size and demure, she is a gift from Senor Francisco Javier Sauza, Mexican industrialist, tequila tycoon and rancher, as a token of friendship between Mexico and Canada.

Sauza and some associates were on hand for the ceremony today, with the goddess resting temporarily on a wood base. She's made of a soft material, described by one official as a "sort of pumice-stone compound."

Originally intended for display outdoors, at a location yet to be chosen, it may be she will have to dwell indoors. Mayor Peter Pollen was expected to consult with the donor and local experts before settling that question.

There's another possibility. Winter clothes. It may be practical to toughen her with hardener and sealer for outdoor display.

Two Tries on Hall, Arson Trial Told

Two Victoria men filled plastic jugs with gasoline at a self-serve gas station and made two attempts to set fire to the Jehovah's Witnesses Kingdom Hall before succeeding last October, county court was told Wednesday.

Crown witness Raymond Kapfer said he accompanied John Robert Atkinson and Terry Darrow Emerson, both 21, to the hall on Joan Crescent Oct. 13.

Emerson and Atkinson are standing trial on a charge of arson before Judge Peter Millward and a jury of six men and six women.

Kapfer, 18, of 1099 Princess, said he first met Atkinson about a year ago, when Atkinson moved in next door.

Kapfer said his own family is of the Jehovah Witness faith and he used to be.

Atkinson and Emerson picked him up in a car Oct. 13 in the evening and said they intended to burn down the hall, Kapfer testified.

"I don't know who it was said by," Kapfer added.

"I said they were crazy and they'd get caught sooner or later," Kapfer told court.

He said he sat in the car while Atkinson and Emerson gathered six or eight plastic jugs from the disposal unit behind Smitty's Pancake House on Douglas about 8:30 p.m.

"I just sat there wondering whether they were bluffing or for real."

The gasoline, he said, was obtained at a station on Hillside and Atkinson got rags from his Burnside home. Kapfer said he took no part in the preparations and made one attempt to leave the pair, but was stopped.

"I wanted to take off and go home because I wanted no part of it.

"But Emerson and Atkinson came to stop me . . . and I didn't want to start a hassle so I got back in the car."

The car, a gold Comet, stopped 200 yards from the hall, and Kapfer testified he could partially see the hall.

"The two travelled fast (on foot) toward the Kingdom Hall, and I sat in the car and said to myself — 'they're going to do it.'" Kapfer said under questioning by Prosecutor David Lisson.

Atkinson and Emerson, he said, were carrying the jugs filled with gas and rags. They returned to the car a short time later and "Atkinson said it didn't work but he'd try it again."

After driving around the block the car returned to the same place, Kapfer said, and both got out, ran down to the hall. One of them had a cigar lit."

When the pair returned this time, Atkinson said "we did it —but I think we were seen; there was a lady or a man walking a dog."

Kapfer said when they drove by the hall "the whole place was in flames."

"We went to Emerson's house and we picked up Emerson's black car" and later the three of them went to Coffee Mac's and had something to eat.

After the trio had eaten, they picked up a friend named Frank.

"And one of them (Emerson and Atkinson) told Frank — 'we got jugs, and rags and put them in a mail box at Kingdom Hall,'" Kapfer testified.

They parked the car at Craigdarroch Castle near Kingdom Hall, and asked Frank to go down to the hall and see the damage done, Kapfer said.

The trio hid behind brush where "we could vaguely see the fire, fire trucks, smoke and police officers," said Kapfer.

Trial continues today when Kapfer will be cross-examined by defence counsel Doug Christie and Don Farquhar.

Loitering Drunks Upset Merchants

Winos are going to get the bum's rush out of Nootka Court and Centennial Square as Victoria police start increasing patrols in both areas.

City manager Jim Bramley told council's finance committee today that police patrols in the two areas have been stepped up and that should solve the problem of drunks loitering.

Nootka Court developer Hans Hartwig, in a letter to council, said a number of alcoholics have chosen the court as a hangout.

"They have . . . molested the tenants occupying the stores; threatened their customers; vomited in the hallways; pulled knives on the night watchman and maintenence men; pointed a rifle at one of the tenants, pedestrians, and last spring tore the clothes off a girl trying to rape her," Hartwig said in his letter.

Hartwig said police had been helpful in removing the drunks from the court but it was police opinion that the tenants had no right to lay charges for trespassing because the building has become a public thoroughfare.

He asked that council give the tenants "relief from these criminal elements" and said if that was not done, provisions would be made to remove the drunks by force from the premises.

In another letter to council, about 20 shop owners in Nootka Court suggested that a couple of police officers on foot patrol in the downtown would be enough to keep "these unsavory people" from loitering in Nootka Court.

The letter said the drunks, who frequent the government liquor store, often corner passersby to beg money.

The merchants said two drunk men had been observed propositioning a young boy on the sidewalk outside Nootka Court. A businesswoman from the court intervened and sent the boy on his way, the letter said.

Bramley said the stepped-up police patrols would probably mean police cars would drive by the area more often but said he felt that would solve the problem.

Cabbage Man 'Crying' Again Says Safeway

A Saanich savoy cabbage grower who is upset because supermarkets won't accept his early, bumper crop for quick sale, is stuck with his specialty crop until he offers it "at a price," a Canada Safeway spokesman said today.

Market gardener Geoff Vantreight complained Wednesday to Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors his 100-ton cabbage crop is caught in the squeeze of a warm September and the federal freeze on prices.

But Safeway district manager Jack Fidler said Vantreight plants a lot of the specialty item "and every year he's crying on our shoulders to take his crop."

The crop is early and Vantreight said he and other farmers on Vancouver Island and in the Fraser Valley find they have a sudden surplus that chain food stores will not buy for "specials."

Fidler said savoy cabbage is a specialty item and does not sell in quantities comparable to conventional varieties.

If Vantreight offers his cabbage "at a price, we'll consider it," Fidler said.

"We back local growers. We sell everything we can while they're in storage," before turning to imports, he said.

Vantreight said the chains told him they had not been able to get clarification on how the guidelines limiting price increases will apply to items which have been marked down as advertised specials and later rise to normal levels.

He said one interpretation is that controls appear to prevent markdown substantially below current market value.

The chains, he said, cannot buy his crop for quick sale at 39 cents a pound because later in the season they must offer imported cabbage at 59 cents, which will be in excess of the allowable rise in retail price.

Normally the cabbage would not be ready to harvest until December, January or February and Vantreight said much of it has spoiled already, so he is offering it cheap to recover what he can.

A spokesman for Malkin's wholesale produce had no comment on Vantreight's allegation, but he said he had had no adverse experience with the guidelines so far.

"Special prices to us are passed along quickly to the stores," he added.

Fidler pointed out there is a backlog of product on the Lower Mainland due to shutdown of supermarkets for more than a month with labor problems, and because there was less advertising carried out in Greater Victoria during that period.

Vantreight told directors the chain stores had put off a decision pending clarification of the guidelines, but each day spoils more cabbage.

"All I can do is let it rot there. It'll smell up all of Saanich. At least they'll know where I live," the grower said.

The chamber will wire Victoria members of Parliament and anti-inflation review board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin to resolve the question of advertised specials in the context of price controls.

The Failure of Women Where It Most Counts

Our middle daughter, Jill, who is a militant advocate of the women's liberation philosophy and whose occasional weekends back in the nest create a debating society that gives me perverse pleasure, is very cross at me now about that column on married women in hotels.

I thought, myself, it was a pleasant enough essay, being devoted to the obvious response of escape and even delight that a woman may exhibit when she has a reprieve from household duties as we enjoyed up at Qualicum last month during a short vacation.

But no, said Jill. It was condescending and patronizing, the typical prattling of a male chauvinist, she said. "You sounded," said she, "as if you'd let the dog out of the kennel for a nice walk and wasn't it just grand of you. Ooo, there are times when you make me so mad!"

I am not mentioning this now to show you that there's nothing like a visiting daughter to penetrate Daddy's little puncture-prone psyche, which you already know if you've a daughter of two, but simply to illustrate once more why I am so often befuddled about what it is that women really want in the name of liberation.

You can't put this down to a mere generation gap. That particular column had barely appeared before a woman reader, fully my own age, was on the telephone asking me who the devil I thought I was conferring, as she put it, a temporary freedom on my wife.

It seems to me to ignore the whole fabric of marriage and its joint partnership and I think it explains, too, why the so-called liberation movement has never really had the support of women. Even to suggest that there is a male-domination in the relationship of wedlock is laughable.

I look about this office now, looking at some of my male friends whose homes I have been in, and I visualize a sort of composite husband. I'm damned if I can see anything wrong with him.

He turns over almost everything he earns to his wife. He shares with his wife those tiny triumphs or setbacks in his own work and he shares, too, in her own difficulties or victories. He is, though he may not admit it, very conscious of the dangers of tedium or fatigue in what she does. Far from resentment or suppression, if he has a wife who holds down her own job or has outside interests, he is proud of that involvement. What's more he believes in the ancient tenets of a genuine liberation, the woman's right to a full equality in society. Sure, he may be a difficult or downright miserable person. But he is very seldom a chauvinist.

That's where I think so many women's liberationists, so very often spinsters of one kind or another, have gone wrong. They either don't know or don't care that the vast majority of women are quite content with the lives they lead or, if they're not, they know the alternatives.

Apart from this, what puts me off about this "movement" is that women have done little or nothing in the one area where, it can be said, males demonstrably exploit females.

If we accept the fact that women are the principal consumers of household goods in our society then it is little short of scandalous that they go along with every sort of cynical gimmick and merchandising trick that can be devised.

Those women I know who carry on the good fight within the consumers' groups tell me it's impossible to interest or promote a membership with the vast majority of women shoppers. The consumer guide magazines, probably the most worthwhile magazines on the market today, have about one-fiftieth of the circulation of any crummy magazine that contains a feature on Jackie Kennedy.

The women liberationists like to say that they are working for an age of enlightenment, in short, but where women might have the most profound influence on the economy of the home and the nation they are rarely heard.

We're told that the hard facts of inflation have cut down somewhat on impulse buying, that supreme idiocy of the woman shopper, but in every other area there is still the wishful philosophy of getting something for nothing and a willingness to put quality or price on a level below the most flagrant rip-offs of the market.

Inflation or not, women are mad for prizes and, indeed, it is a way of life in the supermarket. Newspapers, radio and television are crammed with give-away offers. Win a free trip to Hawaii, to Acapulco, to Tahiti! Win a year's supply of dog food! Win $100,000 by simply sending in the labels! It must often surprise the manufacturers and the retailers, but the fact is that a massive advertising campaign and the promise of a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow is still more effective than any kind of price-cutting.

This, of course, is the male domination that chains women far more than any fancied prejudice of status or opportunity, yet clearly they're not prepared to take a position and are content to whine at what they assume to be the male assumption of "superiority." It makes you wonder, indeed, if the male isn't, in fact, superior since I am perfectly sure that no male shopper would allow himself to be hoodwinked so long and so easily.

If there is to be any real liberation it must start where women have more or less complete control over their own destinies. That is the first step. If others are necessary they will come after women have demonstrated that they can cope with their own responsibilities.

Police Wages Slipped to 18th

In 10 years Victoria city policemen have slipped from the position of third highest paid police officers in Canada to 18th in a list of 21 cities with population exceeding 60,000.

The testimony was given at the opening today of an arbitartion hearing which will result in a binding award on the city of Victoria and its police force — the culmination of negotiations which began 10 months ago and nearly reached a strike stage last month.

Victoria lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood is represenfing the police union, and Vancouver lawyer Jack Giles is appearing for the city.

In his opening statement, Owen-Flood told Barclay he will be calling a total of eight witnesses during the two days set aside this week for presentation of the police case. They will include Bob Stewart, formerly of the B.C. Police Commission and now deputy police chief for the city of Vancouver.

BARCLAY
arbitrator

The city will make its submission Thursday and Friday next week.

Pat Braiden, president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, gave lengthy testimony tracing the general background to wage negotiations with the city of Victoria going back to 1946 and involving a total of 29 collective agreements. Most of those, he said, were settled only by arbitration or mediation.

Braiden said in 1964 Victoria policemen were only $9 behind their counterparts in Vancouver, who were then paid $511 per month, making them the highest paid police department in Canada. Victoria held third position.

By July 1, 1974, however, the differential had widened to $67. At that time a first class constable in Vancouver was getting $1,171 per month and a Victoria constable $1,104 per month.

Braiden referred to a mediation commission award handed down by Judge Parker two years ago in which the judge dismissed the city's contention that its policemen should be paid on a par with Saanich officers.

"The responsibilities of Saanich policemen cannot be as onerous as those of Victoria City Police," the award stated. "It is our view that the proper comparison is between Victoria and Vancouver."

Braiden produced a "crime map" showing that in Victoria's downtown core 40 per cent of the metropolitan area's criminal offences are reported, with the crime rate decreasing steadily with distance from the city centre.

Owen-Flood said later witnesses will produce figures to prove that Victoria has "the highest crime rate per policeman" of any city in B.C.

Agreement by both sides late last month to seek binding arbitration narrowly averted a threatened strike.

Earlier, the city had refused to endorse a contract offer submitted by the Victoria Police Board and accepted by the union. The union subsequently requested a Labor Relations Board ruling on whether the city was bound by the collective agreement.

The LRB ruling said the city did have the right to refuse.

In other words, a municipality and not its police board has the final say on what salaries should be paid to its policemen.

The city police initially sought parity with police forces on the Lower Mainland. During negotiation they reduced their demand to that of parity with Saanich, involving increases of 22.3 to 34 per cent.

The city's maximum offer, after rejecting the police board proposal, was 17.5 per cent.

Four Hurt In Crash

Four men were injured and two cars received $4,000 damage in a collision early this morning at the entrance to Paul's restaurant, 1900 Douglas.

Treated for minor injuries and released from Victoria General Hospital were John Stevens, 3016 Jutland; Kevin Benedick, same address; Gregory Howard, 1304 Charlton; and Vincent Wilson of Victoria.

Wilson had been driving south on Douglas and Stevens was headed north when their cars collided at 2:11 a.m., police said.

N.Y. Banks 'Use Pressure'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senator has charged the powerful banks of New York City, with millions at stake, are keeping other banks from publicly criticizing proposals to save the city from default.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, (Dem.-Ill.) told colleagues Wednesday he was having trouble getting out-of-town bankers to testify about their opinion of efforts to rescue New York.

"They do not dare do it because they are intimidated by certain banks in New York," Stevenson said.

Many New York banks have invested millions in New York City and state bonds. They would suffer heavily if the city and the state default, or fail to pay debts as they become due.

Without massive federal help, the city is expected to default in December and the state could follow in the spring.

Stevenson's complaint came amid other indications of opposition to a proposal which would provide a federal guarantee for a $5 billion loan to avert the city's default if bankers agree to put up an unguaranteed $1 billion. Opponents blocked the senate banking committee from acting on the bill and Republicans boycotted an informal committee meeting.

Last Saturday, David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and the chairmen of six other major banks testified against permitting the city to default. They acknowledged they had a "self interest" in such a move.

Stevenson told reporters he did not mean the New York bankers had done anything "covert" to silence their out-of-town colleagues.

"They're all tied into the larger banks and they're reluctant, they're scared to rock the boat," he said.

He suggested reporters call Allen Stults, chairman of the American National Bank in Chicago. Stults confirmed he would not let his bank staff work privately with Stevenson's staff.

Kissinger's Chinese Farewell Cool

PEKING (WP) — The farewell banquet given by Henry Kissinger here Wednesday night ended on a cool note with toasts that said, in effect, that the basis for the Sino-American relationship is still intact but that both sides will have to agree to disagree on many of the issues that divide them.

The banquet was given in the Great Hall of the People on the eve of Kissinger's departure for Tokyo after four days of talks.

The upcoming visit of President Ford was China's blessing, as evidence by Chairman Mao Tse-tung receiving Kissinger Tuesday, but from the tone of things here Wednesday night there cannot have been much agreement during the working sessions with Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping on some of the issues that concern the Chinese, such as their fear of Soviet-American detente and perhaps even the pace of the Sino-American relationship.

Kissinger said: "We are satisfied with our visit. Our two countries are too self-reliant to need reassurance and too experienced to confuse words with reality or tactics with strategy."

He said the two countries had ended their estrangement because of how they perceived their national interests, and that the relationship would be nurtured by "respecting each others views regarding our national interests." It appeared that he was referring to detente with the Soviet Union.

Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua, in a toast that some sources here said was unusually curt, said that the two sides had a "frank exchange of views on the current international situation . . . Our talks have enabled us to have a clearer understanding of each other's views."

Kissinger made it clear before he left Washington that there would be no big breakthrough coming out of his visit here and it was generally understood that anything talked about now would have to be brought up again during Ford's visit next month.

Helms Told L.B.J.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former Central Intelligence Agency Director Richard Helms said Wednesday that he believes he told the late President Johnson about the CIA's secret mail opening project in 1967, some six years before it was abandoned.

Testifying before the Senate Intelligence Committee, Helms said he did not know whether any other president had been notified during the mail intercept's 20-year history, but emphasized that he could not rule it out.

The illegal mail intercepts involving correspondence to and from the Soviet Union began in 1953 and involved the openings of nearly 216,000 letters before the program was halted in early 1973 out of fears of disclosure.

Helms' testimony was the first indication that any president had been informed of the project.

U.S. Senate Votes to Cut Federal Gas Price Control

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate has voted to start erasing more than 20 years of federal controls on natural gas prices.

Senators approved 58-32 Wednesday night a bill to phase out the federal controls gradually, and to allow some emergency sales this winter at prices far above current federal limits, so the industries expected to be worst hit by a natural gas shortage can get more of it.

Defeated 50 to 40 was an amendment sponsored by Philip Hart (Dem.—Mich.), James Abourezk (Dem.—S.D.) and other critics of the oil industry, who said control by the 15 largest oil firms of every state in oil production and marketing from drilling to retail sales stifles competition and allows the giant firms to strangle independents.

The winter shortage is expected to be 1.3 trillion cubic feet, and it was estimated that under the emergency bill one-fourth of the shortage could be offset, resulting in a supply shortfall about the same as last winter.

"This is a first and long overdue step," Sen. James B. Pearson, (Rep.—Kan.) a main sponsor of the bill, said. "We have finally passed a bill to help with the gas shortage this winter as well as encourage development of new gas reserves."

However, Rep. John D. Dingell, (Dem.—Mich.) one of the most influential house members on energy matters, told a reporter he would do all he could to narrow the bill in the house back to its original scope—emergency legislation for the winter only.

The bill as passed by the senate would allow interstate customers access to gas that otherwise would be sold only to buyers within the state in which it is produced. These intrastate buyers, not bound by federal price controls, have been paying up to $2 per thousand cubic feet for gas.

Interstate buyers, limited to the federal ceiling of 51 cents per thousand cubic feet, have not been able to outbid in-state purchasers.

Under the bill, both buyers would be on the same footing: they could bid for gas at no more than the highest mid-summer rate for each state. Those rates range from $1.30 to $2 per thousand cubic feet.

FIGHT INFLATION. SPEND LESS. AND GET MORE.

In the face of the Canadian Government's recent tough stance on inflation, Toyota would like to re-introduce the stance we've taken all along: we'd like you to spend less of your money...and get more for it.

While that may seem to be a contradictory piece of logic to many of you, we'd like to assure you that it's far from fiction. With Toyota it's a fact. Our 1976 Corolla 1200 is a good example of just how true it can be. It costs less than a Pinto, Datsun or Chevette. And yet it gives you more.

So, if you were to choose between a Toyota Corolla 1200 and any of those three basic cars, the less you spent, the more you'd get.

Simple, isn't it?

1976 MODEL COMPARISON

	Toyota Corolla 1200 cc	Chevette Scooter 1400 cc	Pinto Pony 2300 cc	Datsun B-210 1400 cc

THE CHART TELLS PART OF THE STORY.

And the part it tells, you're not likely to hear from the other small car manufacturers.

Because the facts and figures shown are proof that Toyota 1200 gives you more standard features than Pinto, Datsun or Chevette. And that is something they wouldn't want you to find out about. Or maybe they think the extra standard equipment the Corolla offers isn't important. The fact is, we think much of it is essential.

We look on our electric rear window defroster, our power front disc brakes and our heavy duty battery as safety features, not as luxury options. And we don't think you should pay extra to get into a comfortable driving position. That's why we offer you adjustable, reclining bucket seats at no extra cost.

And finally, because we feel that most of these features are essential, we don't think you should pay through the nose to get them. That's the reason Toyota Corolla is lower priced than Pinto, Datsun or Chevette.

MORE THAN THE CHART IS RIGHT.

Our chart doesn't quite say it all, because Toyotas are not only built to give you more for less, they're also built to last.

They're assembled on some of the world's most thoroughly automated facilities. Facilities, where the tedious and exacting jobs are controlled by computers, so that even on the smallest, most insignificant job there is no room for human error. With computers to check on the computers, so there's no room for computer error.

Cylinder block, pistons, crankshaft, are all weighed, checked and mated, resulting in a precision matched engine that runs with decreased vibration, less wear and tear, better performance, greater durability and reliability. And each panel and seam of the body shell is spot welded to virtually eliminate the possibility of a rattle in years to come.

If you think we're fastidious about how we build our cars you should see how we test them.

WE BUILD AND TEST. AND TEST AND BUILD.

We put them through a water and drizzle test that totally drenches them for days on end. We put them through a dust tunnel. And on a suspension monitor that would jiggle the daylights out of many a car. Then we hand them over to experienced test drivers who drive them crazy.

In fact, the way we torture test our cars, you'd think we hated them.

But in the final analysis, it's all worth it. Because nine out of ten Toyotas ever sold in Canada are still on the road.

And if that doesn't mean you're fighting inflation by making your dollar go farther and last longer, we don't know what does.

Finally, when you've considered all the things about a Toyota Corolla 1200—what we build into it and what we sell it for, how we build it and how long it tends to last—we think you'll agree; it's simply more car for less money.

Which just could be why Toyota Corolla is the top selling automobile model in the world. And the number one import in Canada.

Terrific.

Karen 'Loved Life' but Not Like This

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (WP) — The mother of comatose Karen Ann Quinlan testified Wednesday that on three separate occasions her daughter had said she would not want her life maintained by "extraordinary means" such as a respirator.

"When I see her in this condition, I know in my heart, as her mother, that this is not the way Karen would want to be, maybe that's why it was easier for me to reach this decision," Mrs. Quinlan told the crowded courtroom.

Mrs. Quinlan testified during the third day of court hearings on her husband's request to turn off the respirator that has been keeping their daughter alive.

Karen, 21, has been in a coma since April 14, when she mixed drugs and alcohol during a birthday party for a friend.

Composed though tense throughout her 43-minute testimony, Mrs. Quinlan repeated what she said had been conversations with her daughter about family friends who had died of cancer.

"Mommy, please don't ever let them keep me alive with any extraordinary means, or in any way so that she (I) could not enjoy life to the fullest," Mrs. Quinlan quoted her daughter as saying.

Attorneys for the state and county objected to her testimony about the conversations on grounds that it was hearsay evidence. However, Judge Robert Muir Jr. ruled that "the statements could be admissible if made in good faith . . . or when mental condition is at issue."

And Daniel Coburn, the court-appointed attorney who is defending Miss Quinlan's "right to live," said, "I can't lose sight of the fact I happen to be the attorney, but this is the only time in this case when anyone is going to hear from Karen.

"There have been other times when I have disagreed with what a client was going to say, so under the circumstances I won't object."

The courtroom was hushed as Mrs. Quinlan told the judge that her daughter "loved life" and would not want to remain a vegetable dependent upon a respirator.

Only two months before Miss Quinlan suddenly went into the coma, her mother said, a family friend was dying of cancer and wanted to come home to die." Karen said that was what she would do, Mrs. Quinlan related. "To remain in her own surroundings rather than being kept alive for months or years."

Mrs. Quinlan testified that the three conversations were "not the only occasions when she said she wouldn't want to be kept alive in any way that she could not live life to the fullest."

Mrs. Quinlan told the court it was she who, weeks before the other members of her family, came to believe that her daughter would never recover.

"Seeing Karen daily, I could see her getting worse every day, from different indications that I had, the different positions her body was going into. I felt there was absolutely no hope."

Mary Ellen Quinlan, 19, also testifying Wednesday, said she too talked with her sister Karen about the prolongation of life in hopeless cases.

She related one particular occasion when she and Karen were discussing the deaths of the father of a mutual friend.

Mary Ellen Quinlan quoted her sister as saying she "wouldn't want to be kept alive because she saw part of the family die too. She was friends with this girl and she saw what this girl went through" and would not want her family to suffer the same fate.

U.S. ROAD TOLL DIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. transportation department says tighter enforcement of the U.S.-wide 55-mile-per-hour speed limit—although unpopular—may have reversed a trend toward higher highway death tolls seen earlier this year.

A report by the department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration showed 4,134 traffic fatalities in September, almost three per cent fewer than in the same month last year and about 16 per cent below the 1973 level.

It was the second straight month in which the 1975 figures were lower than those of 1974. The August death toll was amost 4 per cent lower this year than last.

"We'd like to think it's due to better enforcement of the 55-M.P.H. speed limit, although there is no way to definitely prove it," a spokesman said. He said a crackdown on speeders in many areas during recent months "hasn't been popular, but it has had a definite effect."

Picket-Crossing Guildsmen Organize for Legal Battle

WASHINGTON (WP) — Washington Post reporters, photographers and commercial employees, who have been crossing picket lines and working during the 23-day strike against the newspaper, have organized into a group called the Washington Post Guild Majority to defend themselves against announced union plans to fine and expel them.

An attempt to expel more than 500 members of a union and assess 125 per cent of their strike-period salaries as fines — an amount already in excess of $500,000 — would be the largest such action in U.S. labor union history, according to labor lawyers here.

Some 537 of the more than 800 Post members of the Washington Baltimore Newspaper Guild, AFL-CIO, including virtually all editors, reporters and photographers, have continued to work during the strike, according to Post payroll figures.

More than 250 of the working Post Guild members voted unanimously at a meeting Tuesday to form officially as a group and to hire attorneys Michael Kussbaum and Marguerite Owen to defend them against any union disciplinary charges. Such charges could involve union trials and challenge of any actions in the courts.

The 537 Guild members working constitute about half the 1,000 Post employees who have remained on the job at the Post building during the strike. The Post normally employs 2,673 persons, according to company spokesmen, and is one of the largest private employers in the Washington area.

About 50 or 60 Post executives and employees have been living in the building during the strike.

The Guild is the largest of the 12 union locals, representing Post employees but is not the only one crossing picket lines. The Post's pressmen began the strike Oct. 1, and caused more than $1 million damage to the newspaper's presses. The photoengravers and mailers joined the strike several days later.

The small janitors' union, Service Employees International Union Local 32, represents 60 Post janitorial employees and has 51 of them working during the strike, according to Post officials.

The brouhaha in union circles is being caused by the Post Guild unit's defiance of "directives" from Guild Local officials, who represent some 2,500 newspaper and trade publication employees in the Baltimore-Washington area, and who have ordered Post Guild members not to cross picket lines.

Arms Sale Contested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, (Dem-Ind.) wants to stop what he calls "the mad pace" of U.S. arms sales to Kuwait.

He is mounting an effort to get Congress to disapprove the shipment of $32 million worth of Sidewinder air-to-air missiles to the oil-rich Persian Gulf state.

The state department plans to defend the sale, at a congressional hearing on Friday, on the grounds Kuwait feels threatened by Iraq, with which it has already had military clashes over several offshore islands. Hamilton said he is deeply concerned over large military sales to Kuwait and to the Persian Gulf generally.

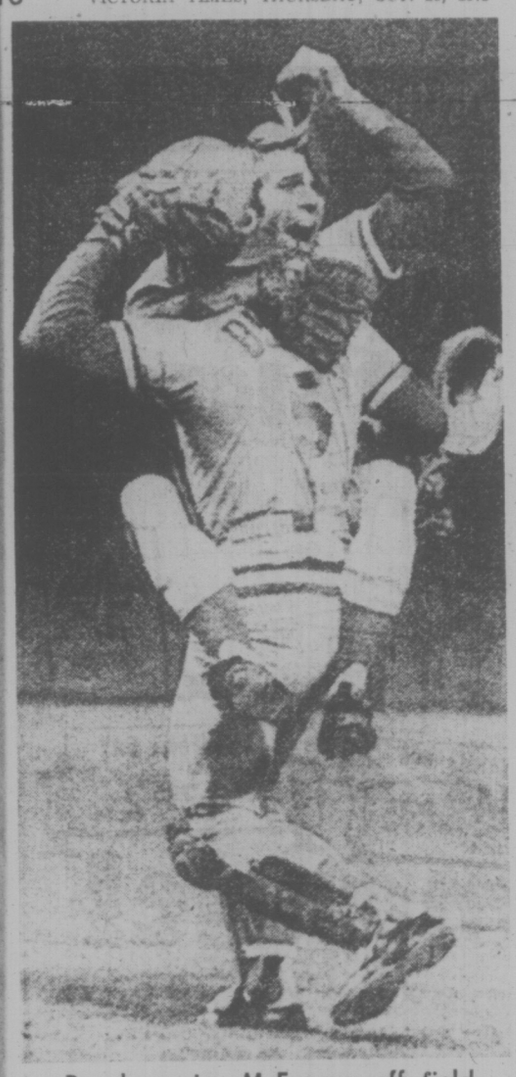
Frustration Ends for Reds



Bench carries McEnaney off field

BOSTON (AP) — For the last few years, Cincinnati Reds hve been thinking like champions.

Now they finally have a championship to prove they're the best.

After a fistful of frustrations, the Reds beat Boston Red Sox 4-3 Wednesday night in the final game of the 1975 World Series.

"We went to the Series in 1972 and thought we were the best team and were beaten by Oakland A's and then we lost in the playoffs to New York Mets in 1973 and thought we were the best then," said Joe Morgan, who got the game-winning hit with two outs in the ninth inning Wednesday night.

"Until we prove it on the field, we're nothing," Morgan added. "Now I can go home and say, 'We're the best.'"

Before winning the tense seventh game in the hostile atmosphere of Boston's colorful old Fenway Park, Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson had been criticized for not winning big games. His disappointments went back to the 1970 World Series, when the Reds were steamrollered by Baltimore Orioles in five games.

Then, after running away with the National League pennant in 1972, the Reds were deflated by the A's in seven games. In 1973, the Reds won the league's West Division but were upset in the playoffs by the Mets.

The Red Sox took the series opener at Fenway, 6-0, behind the five-hit pitching of Luis Tiant, but the Reds won the second game 3-2 with two runs in the ninth.

Switching to Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium for the third game, the Reds won 6-5 in 10 innings on a controversial bunt. Boston catcher Carlton Fisk claimed pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister, who had laid down a sacrifice bunt, interfered with his attmpt to make a play.

Fisk collided with Armbrister and his throw to second went awry, putting runners on first and third and setting up the winning run.

The notorious "collision bunt" became the cause celebre of this series and Larry Barnett, the home plate umpire who was involved in the play, eventually had his life threatened and needed protection from the FBI.

Tiant came back to salvage the fourth game for the Red Sox, winning 5-4 but the Reds were easy 6-2 winners in the fifth game.

With the Reds in the driver's seat, leading in games 3-2, the teams came back to Boston for the last weekend.

But it turned into a lost weekend as rain washed out not only Saturday's and Sunday's games but Monday night's rescheduled one as well.

When they finally got back to action for the sixth game, it was well worth the wait. The teams played a game that will probably be remembered for years to come. Carlton Fisk's home run leading off the 12th inning saved the Red Sox from elimination, giving Boston a thrilling 7-6 win.

That set the stage for the finale. But before the curtain came down for the Red Sox, they took the spotlight.

Boston scored three runs off Gullett with the help of the lefthander's wildness in the third inning.

"I was real concerned, down three runs," Anderson said. "I wanted to stay with Gullett because he's my best, but he was too eager and was overthrowing the ball.

Lee kept the Reds from scoring through the first five innings. But in the sixth an error by second baseman Denny Doyle opened the door for the Reds. Perez hit a long home run over the left-center field screen and the Reds were back in business.

Cincinnati tied it on Pete Rose's run-scoring single in the seventh. The noisy Boston crowd of 35,205 became less overbearing at this point, and even quieter when the Reds bolted ahead in the ninth.

Ken Griffey walked to start the winning rally. He was sacrificed to second by Cesar Geronimo, a defensive star for the Reds all through the Series.

Dan Driessen batted for winner Clay Carroll and grounded out, sending Griffey to third. Rose then walked before Morgan hit loser Jim Burton's 1-2 pitch to centre for the gamewinning single.

"It was something low and outside," said Morgan. "To be honest, I probably would have struck out on a pitch like that two years ago.

"I waited 11 years for that hit."

Meeting for Ginnell Precedes Ice Action

Victoria owner-coach Pat Ginnell had a prior commitment today before his Cougars play two Western Canada Hockey League games here this weekend.

Ginnell was scheduled to talk with Memorial Arena manager John Morgan this morning and one likely topic for discussion will be the Oct. 4 incident when Ginnell and Mayor Peter Polen exchanged heated words during a second-period brawl between the Cougars and Calgary Centennials.

Pollen called for a meeting with Ginnell, Morgan and the city to discuss the incident but the Victoria coach left on a road trip with his team Oct. 6. He returned Wednesday.

Currently in third place in the Western Division, the Cougars play their next game against Saskatoon Blades starting at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, they take on Kamloops Chiefs in a 7:30 contest.

Blades lost their six-game win streak Wednesday when Rob Flockhart scored a pair of goals to pace the Chiefs to a 7-3 victory in Kamoops.

In other action, rookie Steve Tambellini scored three goals to lead the Broncos to a 5-3 win over Edmonton Oil Kings in Lethbridge and Rob Tudor tallied three times to spark the Pats to a 9-1 triumph over Flin Flon Bombers in Regina.

Rerun for Revealing Dive

MEXICO CITY (CP) — It was team-mate Jane Nutter of Toronto who won the gold medal in the Pan-American Games platform diving competition Wednesday, but the Mexican television audience cherishes fond memories of bronze medallist Linda Cuthbert.

The 18-year-old from Beaconsfield, Que., was performing one of her optional dives when the strap of her suit broke as she hit the water. The suit slipped to her waist but she repaired the damage before she surfaced.

Linda's mishap was witnessed by an underwater television camera which beamed it throughout the country. Ungallantly, the network offered two reruns of the incident, the second while she was doing live commentary without being aware of what was being shown on the screen.

"I really wanted to do well," Miss Cuthbert said afterwards. "I thought I was diving well right up to that point and then things seemed to kind of come apart."

Things were also coming apart for the Canadian swimming team. Its predecessor in Cali, Colombia, four years ago had won six gold medals, but the current edition has only one gold in 21 events completed to date.

Both the United States and Canadian teams had left some of their top swimmers at home but the Americans, with five victories in as many races Wednesday, continued to show their mastery of the pool.

The times, while slow by current world standards in most races, almost invariably broke Games records.

Canadians won medals in all five races, Line Chenard of Quebec City and Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton claiming both the silver and bronze in the women's 200-metre backstroke behind Donna Wennerstrom of the U.S. Miss Chenard had won the 100-metre backstroke two days earlier.

Joann Baker of Thunder Bay, Ont., won another silver in the women's 200 breaststroke and the Canadian team of Steve Hardy of Vancouver; Mike Biondal of Beaconsfield, Daryl Skilling of Thunder Bay, Ont., and Bruce Robertson of Vancouver was second in the men's 800 freestyle relay.

Other bronze medallists were Michelle Oliver of Agincourt, Ont., in the women's 400 freestyle and Bill Sawchuk of Thunder Bay in the men's 200 individual medley.

Canada won its third silver medal in synchronized swimming as the Calgary Aquabelles finished behind the U.S. in the eight-girl team event.

Jamie and Hugh Kidd of Brantford, Ont., gave Canada another silver as they completed the seven-day yachting program in second place in the Flying Dutchman class.

Team officials expressed satisfaction with the Canadian showing, which included fourth-place finishes in two of the other three classes. Four years ago, the only Canadian yachting medal was a bronze.

It was another day of U.S. domination at the Games. The Americans swept all the individual medals in women's gymnastics, claiming two extra golds as two of their competitors tried for first place in two of the competitions, and won three of the four yachting classes.

The Cubans gave them an argument in men's gymnastics, winning six of the seven individual competitions although they finished second to the Americans in both men's and women's team events.

Brazil, in the Flying Dutchman class of yachting, was the only other country to reach the gold-medal table.

Halifax featherweight Chris Clarke assured himself of no worse than a silver medal by outpointing a Venezuelan opponent in his semi-final bout. He meets Aaron Pryor of the U.S. in the final Saturday, the day after his 19th birthday.

The only other Canadian boxer to reach the semi-finals is Michel Prevost of Montreal in the light middleweight division.

In team sports, the Canadian women's volleyball team kept its faint medal chances alive with a victory over the United States and the baseball and women's basketball teams, both out of the running, defeated teams from El Salvador. The men's basketball team lost to Brazil.

Miss Nutter, who moved to Toronto from Winnipeg last May, fought an ear infection and a determined challenge from world champion Janet Ealey of the U.S. to win the platform diving.

Miss Ealey, who finished the compulsory portion of the competition in fourth place, 15 points behind Miss Nutter, performed more difficult optional dives than the Canadian girl and narrowed the margin steadily. But Miss Nutter held on to win by less than five points.

The second American, Melissa Briley, who had been second after the compulsories, had a bad day and dropped behind Miss Cuthbert on her final dive.

Both Canadian medalists were at the Games only because the top-ranked tower divers, Teri York of Vancouver and Bev Boys of Montreal, chose to stay home to prepare for the Olympics next year.

Miss Nutter, who graduated from the University of Manitoba last spring, is taking the year off to concentrate on diving.

Pro Sports Bubble In for Big Bust?

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League (WFL) became terminally ill in the fall of 1974 as some teams falsified attendance figures and lied to the public. Most defaulted on player payrolls.

A year later, the WFL is dead.

With its revenues weak, with $10 million already lost, with predictions that it might take $40 million and two years more to make any progress, there was really nothing else for the WFL to do.

And so the WFL folded Wednesday, beginning what many believe will be a trend away from the rampant sports' expansion boom of the late '60s and early '70s.

Chris Hemmeter, the Hawaiian millionaire who singlehandedly rescued the WFL from the ashes of its first disastrous season, reorganizing with new owners and a new financing concept, made the announcement.

"Our decision not to proceed is due primarily to our collective inability to penetrate markets in WFL franchise cities," he said.

Translated, that means the WFL's dismal average crowds of 13,370—its only source of income—was sinking every club deep in red ink.

Looking around him at hockey, basketball and tennis leagues which also are losing millions, Hemmeter said:

"We will not be the last. The bubble of the professional sports' boom is in for a bust."

Predictably, a number of clubs say they want to continue. An official of the San Antonio team says his club and three others are working to form yet another league next year.

Hemmeter was not so optimistic. He said sentiment was overwhelming against continuing and doubted any version of the WFL will spring up again soon.

The decision to end the WFL in the 12th week of its second year means that $30 million—$20 million of it in 1974—has been lost. And $15 million is still owed to players, businesses and season ticket holders from 1974. Those people will never see their money.

The decision also sent National Football League (NFL) clubs into late-night meetings. Under a bylaw passed a month ago to accommodate the return of John Gilliam from the WFL, NFL clubs have until next Tuesday to sign any player who becomes a free agent because his team or his league had folded.

Thus, the NFL suddenly has about 380 free agents from the WFL on its hands. The big question is whether such high-salaried players as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield, formerly with Miami Dolphins, are free agents, or whether they are still bound to their contracts.

John Bassett, the WFL Memphis owner who gave the three former Dolphins a $3.5 million package deal, refused to discuss the status of their contracts.

The players' agent, Ed Keating, said they have received about $1.6 million of the total and now are free agents. However, Csonka, Kiick and Warfield have personal service contracts with Bassett, while the vast majority of WFL players were on week-to-week contracts pegged to a percentage of ticket sales.

If those three are free of Bassett, any NFL team could sign them since they played out their options in Miami. But any other NFL team would hve to compensate the Dolphins for signing any of the three.

In another development, the Memphis and Birmingham clubs met a week ago with representatives of the NFL to discuss entrance to that league as expansion franchises. The former WFL teams are hoping to make those applications soon.

The decision to quit was made nine days ago, but put off for a week to see if some desperation moves, like lowering ticket prices, would work.

They didn't; the outcome was that the WFL lost another $250,000.

The 10 teams were Memphis, Birmingham, Charlotte, Jacksonville, Shreveport, Philadelphia, San Antonio Portland, Southern California and Hawaii.

The latter had early speed from along the rail, drifted out slightly entering the stretch and was without the needed closing response. PRINCESS FABIUS vied for the early lead from the outside of COUNTRY WINE, but could not keep up in the drive. SHASTA KHAL showed little. GARRALEEN ducked out at the start. OFF PROUD commenced his bid from between rivals on the stretch turn and prevailed in a hard drive. An objection lodged against the winner by the rider of FOREIGN MINISTER alleging interference around the stretch turn, was not allowed. TOUGH BOSS set all the early pace and just failed. TOUGH MAGIC was wide throughout and finished willingly from the outside of the top two. FOREIGN MINISTER loomed a threat leaving the stretch turn, but was unable to sustain his bid. Timbermen Dominate Cowichan players dominated the Vancouver Island Canadian Football League award selections, it was learned Wednesday.

Cowichan winners were Ross McCauley as most valuable player, Brian Bellis as most outstanding player, Rick Kitagawa as the outstanding offensive back and Bob Boyd as top lineman.

Playoff action opens Sunday with a sudden-death semi-final between Oak Bay Farmer Construction and Saanich Hornets at 7:30 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Winner of that game will advance to the final the following Sunday against the Timbermen. Cowichan earned a berth in the final when Saanich Vampires defaulted.

Doug Mitten, Mutuel Manager at Sandown Park, who holds the same position at Exhibition Park in Vancouver, explained it Wednesday.

"They bet about the same. If there is a difference it is probably that there is more show betting in Victoria."

Otherwise, he figures the percentages would work out approximately the same.

Of course, it's a trifle different this fall with Sandown Park having gimmick or exotic wagering on every race.

"We weren't quite sure what to expect," he said; "and it has been a bit of a surprise. I thought the gimmick betting might take voer, but it hasn't. For example on Wednesday in the first race, the Exactor wagering outdrew the win, place and show. The figures were $7,467 to $6,949. Then in every race after that with the quinella pool in force, the win, place show prevailed."

And although Mitten didn't know it at the time, the win place, show took over in the final race, and Exactor wagering event, $13,984 to $10,065. Actually more money was bet on the last race, a total of $24,049, than on any other race, and that contributed to another first at Sandown, the best Wednesday ever, a mutuel handle of $155,080.

Think that is good? Well, maybe it is. But according to Mitten, B.C. bettors haven't seen anything yet.

Next year at Exhibition Park, the equipment will be so sophisticated that a bettor will be able to buy anything from a win, place and show to an exactor or quinella ticket at the same wicket. And there will be wickets for $5, $10, $50 and maybe $20 and $100 for the same bets. This will give Ex-Park wagering facilities second only to one other track, one in Delaware, and Mitten couldn't recall the name when interviewed.

So things change and Victorians are betting more than ever before.

Meanwhile at the track, favorites were only partly the rule and jockey Garth Carter didn't get his fourth straight three-winner day. The longest price of the day, and even the meeting, came in the third when General Ridge came from the clouds to nip Rusty B. Good and The Aryan at the wire in a three-horse photo-finish and pay $38.70. Then in the fourth there was the high for a quinella for the meeting as Off Proud and Tough Boss combined for a payoff of $141.80.

The featured seventh was won by El Escorial, rather easily in fact, with Freedom Charger and the favorite, Devon Sea, second and third.

Mark Walker had two winners, Y. B. Wise in the fifth, which paid $5.20, and Why Beeb in the eighth, at $6.30. Tom Wolski also had a pair, Towner Park at $22.20 in the second and Off Proud at $15.00. Craig Miller was the third hardboot to score a double, Vital Guard winning the sixth and paying off at $26.40 and El Escorial taking the seventh and rewarding backers with $9.20.

Friday is United Way Day at Sandown and a lottery is planned for the occasion. It will be on a format similar to the Irish Sweepstakes. Contributors will be sold tickets on the seventh race which is the feature. One ticket will be drawn from the barrel on each horse and the lucky person will receive 65 per cent of the take, 35 per cent going to the United Way. Radio and TV personalities will handle the event.

SOCCER
max low

Time has come for a major shakeup among the so-called officials who run Canadian soccer.

It is less than nine months until the 1976 Olympic Games get under way in Montreal and for the host nation, soccer couldn't be in worse shape.

Right now the national team is on its way home after a disastrous few days in the Pan-American Games in Mexico City (conduct in a 2-0 loss to Argentina and an 8-0 defeat by Mexico led to five Canadian players, including Ray Telford of Nanaimo, being suspended and the squad pulled out). The morale could hardly be any lower.

But why?

Well, one reason for the poor Pan-Am performance could be frustration caused by lack of preparation. Canada couldn't afford to send its squad to a mountainous part of the United States to train and be ready for the Mexican altitude. And officials ignored the invitations and urgings of Victoria's former national team coach Bill McAllister to practice in the relatively high altitude in Kimberley. In fact, very little preparation at any altitude was done before Canada sent its team south.

But Canada's soccer problem runs much deeper than that.

It's a well-known fact that the game has been plagued at every level by bickering between officials, by personality clashes, and by lack of co-operation for many years.

Canada's national team coach Colin Morris is the third the squad has had in little over a year. The other two — McAllister and Erkhardt Krautzan of Germany — became frustrated and quit.

As McAllister said Wednesday in a telephone interview from Nanaimo where he was addressing a conference on recreation, because the setup in the Canadian Soccer Association "you get all kinds of responsibility, very little authority and no funding."

"That was my problem and it was Erkhardt's problem too," he added.

And there have been many other problems for the national squad and for Canadian soccer. Like the ridiculous decision to base the so-called team-in-being in Toronto to prepare for the Olympics, instead of on the west coast where the weather permits outside play all winter.

The move to Toronto meant severe upheaval for several B.C. players and their families — including Victoria's Brian Robinson and Bob Bolitho. And there were others, like talented Mike McLenaghen of Vancouver (a former captain of Canada's youth team) who decided the upheaval wasn't worth it and severed their connection with the national squad.

Of course, the national team wasn't "in-being" very long an dwhen it folde dfor financial reasons, Vancouver members of the squad Bruce Wilson, Brain Gant, Sam Lenarduzzi and Neil Ellett all threw in the fiational towel and signed pro forms with Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League.

For those players, it meant the end of dreams of ever playing for their country in the Olympic Games.

But it isn't the end of the saga.

Oh no. Now CSA chairman Bill Stirling of Burnaby says the national squad will be based in Vancouver instead of eastern Canada. And coach Morris will move to Vancouver to live.

"The CSA is not re-starting the team-in-being concept which collapsed earlier this year," says Stirling. "Morris is coming to Vancouver to live, and of course assistant coach John Buchanan of SFU is already here. Eastern-based players will be encouraged to move out here to live, although there is no financial assistance available to help them do so."

Back in 1971, McAllister advocated the team be based in Vancouver, saying "logic dictates that should happen."

Logic? Few in Canadian soccer circles appear to have heard of the word.

Sabres Erasing Doubt

By The Canadian Press

Rick Martin must not take kindly to the chief rap against Buffalo Sabres—sure, they've got firepower, but can they stop the opposition from scoring more?

Martin could have answered the question almost singlehandedly Wednesday night, rifling three goals in a stretch of less than eight minutes in the first period as the Sabres trounced New York Rangers 9-1 in one of seven National Hockey League games.

In other action, Toronto Maple Leafs nipped Vancouver Canucks 3-2, Montreal Canadiens downed Detroit Red Wings 4-1, Los Angeles Kings overcame Chicago Black Hawks 5-3, Kansas City Scouts dumped Washington Capitals 4-2, St. Louis Blues and Atlanta Flames tied 1-1 and California Seals defeated Minnesota North Stars 4-2.

The Sabres surrendered 240 goals in 80 games last year, an average of three per outing, and still won the Adams Division title with a 354-goal offence, second only to the Canadiens.

But when the Sabres lost the Stanley Cup final to Philadelphia Flyers, the cry went up again—the goaltending is not adequate to carry them all the way.

In this young season, the Sabres have given up just 12 goals in their six games, all wins and representing the best record in the league. And if they continue the pace that has seen them score 38 goals in the six games, a goaltending gaffe now and then can hardly prevent them from repeating as division champions.

While Martin pushed his goal total to nine, Don Luce contributed two goals and Jim Schoenfeld, Rene Robert, Danny Gare and Jacques Richard added singles to put goalie Gerry Desjardins at ease at home. Ron Greshner scored the only Rangers goal with an assist from netminder John Davidson, who certainly would have traded his offensive rarity for a better showing between the pipes.

Errol Thompson's goal at 14:12 of the third period snapped a 2-2 tie and gave the Leafs their win at Toronto. Blaine Stoughton and Darryl Sittler had scored second-period goals for the winners after rookie Rich Blight and Don Lever put the Canucks ahead 2-0 with power-play goals in the first period.

Yvan Cournoyer of the Canadiens and Detroit's Walt McKechnie exchanged first-period goals at Detroit before Murray Wilson, Yvon Lambert and Doug Risebrough put it away for Montreal in the second. Bunny Larocque saw his first action of the year in the Canadiens nets when starter Ken Dryden pulled a hamstring late in the first period and did not return after the intermission.

JACQUES PLANTE CALLS IT A DAY

EDMONTON (CP) — Controversial Jacques Plante, one of the greatest goaltenders in hockey history, announced Wednesday he has retired after an illlustrious professional career which spanned 24 years, most of them in the National Hockey League.

In a joint statement, Plante and general-manager Bill Hunter said the retirement is effective immediately and Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association will depend on goaltenders Chris Worthy and Dave Dryden this season.

Plante, 46, was signed to a two-year contract last season for $150,000 a year. No announcement was made on what terms Plante received in the retirement agreement. He has not played a game this season.

Plante, who has lived in Switzerland in recent years, played adequately in his only exhibition appearance this season. He suffered a minor injury during training camp and also had to leave for a few days to settle personal matters in Quebec.

Cowboys Not Scoring

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Cowboys are having their troubles in the first few weeks of the World Hockey Association season and coach Joe Crozier put his finger on the problem Wednesday night.

"We have goal scorers who are just not scoring," he said after the Cowboys absorbed their third loss in four home games and dropped a 2-1 decision to Denver Spurs.

"We're not shooting the puck."

The Cowboys, who have yet to play on the road, have been outshot in each game.

Calgary took the lead in the second period, which had all the scoring, on a goal by rookie Steve Hull, but Daryl Maggs got the Spurs even on a deflection.

Rick Morris scored the Denver winner on a short-handed goal with team-mate Bob Liddington off for tripping. With the Cowboys trying to capitalize on their man advantage, defenceman Wally Olds lost the puck and Morris fired a 25-footer to the short side of goalie Don McLeod.

Calgary remained in the basement of the Canadian Division, while the surprising Spurs, an expansion franchise with a 3-2 record, moved into a first-place tie in the Western Division with Phoenix Roadrunners and Minnesota Fighting Saints.

Smith Must 'Face Music'

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press

Premier Ian Smith of Rhodesia, after an abject apology orchestrated in Pretoria by Prime Minister Vorster of South Africa, now has returned home to face the music.

Few Prime Ministers ever have been forced to make such a complete, public apology, and some observers now are speculating on whether he can survive such a humiliation and remain as Rhodesian leader.

Even before Smith flew to the South African capital Monday, newspapers were after his scalp, with the Johannesburg Sunday Times advising, "Let him have it Mr. Vorster."

The incident that brought already cool relations to a head was Smith's remarkable statement in a British television interview that he was on the point of accord with the African National Council when Vorster intervened and messed things up.

Now South African newspapers are suggesting Smith is in trouble at home and say some cabinet ministers in Salisbury are privately exploring the possibility of Smith's resignation.

"Mr. Smith therefore has apologized to Mr. Vorster for any embarrassment caused by his remarks . . . and assured him that there was no inference that Mr. Vorster had in any way attempted to interfere in Rhodesia's internal affairs."

Even more important, Smith and Vorster said in their own communique that they had agreed to "genuine attempts" to reach a final settlement on majority rule in Rhodesia, 10 years after the country's white-minority government declared unilateral independence from Britain.

GUN-RUNNING PROBED

BRUSSELS (WP) — Authorities here are investigating possible links between Belgian dealers of illicit weapons and terrorist organizations throughout the world.

Reports of widespread gunrunning have circulated here for several months. This week, a fatal explosion led to the discovery of a vast ring with sizable arsenals and international connections.

So far, no definite connections to terrorists groups have been proved, but police say there are strong indications of sales at least to Basque and Portuguese radical elements.

This week's arrests and incidents have renewed rumors that such groups as the Irish Republican Army and the West German radical Baader-Meinoff gang do their shopping at what is being described as "arms department stores" in Belgium. There has been a report that an attempt was made a few months ago to purchase weapons here to ransom French anthropologist Francoise Claustre, long held by rebels in Chad.

This week's bizarre chain of events began in Bastogne, when a man was blown up while working with a bomb from the Second World War.

Investigations at the explosion site uncovered a veritable armory there and links to other depots in Liege, a nearby city with a centuries-old tradition in arms manufacture. There were more weapons found, three persons were arrested and other links were made with earlier gunsmuggling and thefts. A manhunt is under way for the suspected leader of this operation.

This episode is but the latest of several in recent months involving the illicit arms trade here.

Study Forecasts Inflation to Dip

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's penalty-backed guides for wage and price rises should cause inflation to drop significantly in the next two years, but at the cost of slower real growth, a study by an Ottawa-based private economic research company shows.

The study released Tuesday by Informetrica Ltd. said the consumer price index should rise by only 7.7 per cent in 1976 and by 2.9 per cent in 1977, compared with projected increases of 9.6 per cent and 5.8 per cent respectively if the guides had not been imposed.

Consumer prices were rising at an annual rate of more than 10 per cent during September.

Real economic growth will be reduced by two-tenths of a percentage point to 3.9 per cent in 1976 because of the guides, and by half a percentage point to 7.6 per cent in 1977, the study estimates.

The study is a first attempt to assess the effect of the guides, and makes no allowance for other changes, such as reduced government spending or tax cuts.

It found that the unemployment rate — currently about 7 per cent of the work force — would likely show little change.

The study concludes the imposed guides will not result in "either a singular boon or a calamity for the economy."

It adds that the guides could be reinforced strongly by government spending cuts, then a tax reduction, which might lead to a higher rate of real growth and more national production.

In 1846, John Dewar went into business for himself as a spirit merchant at 111 High Street, Perth, Scotland.

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

Sir Thomas Dewar became famous for such terse comments as, "Do right and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman".

Execution Stays 'Travesty'

The federal cabinet decision to stay the death sentences of three convicted killers was described today as a "hypocritical attempt at justice" by the head of the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers.

"The whole thing is a travesty . . . a disgusting exhibition," Det. Const. Phil Jamieson said.

Jamieson, a member of the Saanich police force, said the law prescribes death for killers of policemen and prison guards and that if there is no recommendation for mercy from a jury then the ultimate penalty should be carried out.

"The law is the law and therefore for everyone . . . everyone it seems except those in power in Parliament."

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand announced Wednesday stays of execution had been granted for John Francis Connearney, who was to be hanged in Montreal on Friday, and for Rene Vaillancourt and Real Chartrand, slated for execution midnight Oct. 31.

All three had been convicted of killing police offcers.

Allmand said the cabinet chose to stay rather than commute the sentences as the government intends to bring forth new legislation dealing with the death penalty either later this year or early next.

Accordingly, he said, the three executions were postponed until next July 15.

Jamieson said society is in serious trouble if the cabinet puts off making important decisions until it gets a new law.

"You can't make things retroactive, expecially with the Criminal Code. If you do you just end up fooling around with people's lives."

He felt the cabinet's decision exemplified "too much justice resulting in injustice."

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory, a sharp critic of the government's "soft attitude" toward the death penalty said the stays of execution came as no surprise to him.

He said the decision has made a "mockery of democracy" in Canada and added Canadians who disagree with the decision should apply pressure on their members of Parliament."

Allmand indicated to a meeting of the Ontario Association of Police that an abolition bill will be introduced.

Metropolitan Toronto delegates walked out after Allmand arrived. Syd Brown, their spokesman, said further discussion with Allmand or the government would be useless.

The 15 from Toronto were joined by several from Waterloo, Ont., after Allmand said later: "A life sentence should be a life sentence but not life in prison."

Replying to questions on penalties for murder, he said the cabinet is discussing minimum terms in prison. Under 1972 amendments to the law, those convicted of murder must serve 10 years before they can apply for parole and a judge can impose a minimum sentence without parole of up to 20 years.

HUSBAND CHARGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roy Lowther, 52, was charged Wednesday with murder punishable by life in prison in the death of his wife, Patricia Louise, a noted poet.

Mrs. Lowther's naked, badly-decomposed body was found Oct. 15 about 40 miles north of here by a hunter. An autopsy showed she died of a fractured skull.

Lowther was arrested Tuesday on Mayne Island, where he had been living with his two children.

Mrs. Lowther, 48, was chairman of the Canadian League of Poets and a creative writing instructor at the University of B.C.

Pollard Collection Honored With Scroll

An illuminated scroll has been presented to Mrs. Isabel Pollard of San Francisco on behalf of the citizens of Greater Victoria at a reception at Victoria Art Gallery.

The scroll expressed the gratitude of the gallery board and membership for the deed of gift presented recently in which Mrs. Pollard made the gallery formal owner of the valuable and prestigious Fred and Isabel Pollard Collection.

During the past 14 years Mrs. Pollard has been building an important and wide-ranging collection of Japanese art in memory of her husband. Each year purchases made in Japan, San Francisco or London, have been added to the collection.

In this project Mrs. Pollard has had the assistance of Professor Toru Mori, distinguished Japanese art historian, and Bunzo Nakanishi of Kyoto, a leading collector-connoisseur. Both men have made major personal gifts to the collection.

It now numbers more than 700 Japanese works ranging from paintings, prints and drawings to sculpture and decorative arts. Included also are a number of Chinese paintings, jades and other works of art.

In recent years the collection has become internationally known and the gallery has frequently been requested to lend works to special exhibitions oganized by American museums. Ninety works were borrowed in 1972 by the Royal Ontario Museum for its 60th anniversary celebration.

The Pollard Collection ranks among the four most important single gifts to be received so far in the history of Canadian art galleries, other recipients being the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, the Art Gallery of Ontario and the Winnipeg Art Gallery.

Canadian Terrorists Pressing For Right to Remain in France

PARIS — Five former Quebec separatists involved in the 1970 kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross in Montreal pressed their case Wednesday for political asylum in France.

They appealed to the Conseil d'Etat, France's top administrative court, against a decision by the foreign ministry last February rejecting their asylum applications.

The court president said he will give his ruling next week.

The five, given safe conducts to Cuba in October, 1970, when Cross was freed unharmed after being detained for 60 days, arrived in France last year.

All former members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, they are Jacques Cossette-Trudel and his wife, Louise, both 28, Jean-Marc Carbonneau, 41, Jacques Lanctot, brother of Mrs. Cossette-Trudel, and Yves Langlois.

The lawyer for the five, Maurice Buttin, told the court Cossette-Trudel had said he and his friends want to return to Quebec but are not prepared to face trial. They hope to benefit from a general amnesty in the not-too-distant future, he added.

Cossette-Trudel said he and his wife had given up their separatist aspirations and were now working for Canada's liberation from U.S. economic domination.

Prime Minister Trudeau said last year the Canadian government would not seek extradition of the separatists, but they would face charges if they returned to Canada.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp, meanwhile reiterated in the Commons Wednesday that FLQ terrorists who participated in Quebec kidnappings during the 1970 October Crisis still face prosecution if they return to Canada.

The situation is the same as it has been for the last five years, he added.

Hangings on TV Sought by Cleric

HOFFMAN ESTATES, Ill. — A Toronto born minister concerned about increasing crime advocates public execution of convicted murderers on prime-time television.

"Nothing much else has helped stop crime and I think public executions of convicted killers would be an unbeatable shock method," says Rev. Paul Tinlin, 41-year-old pastor of the Evangel Assembly of God church.

DAD CAN STRIKE BACK...

LONDON (UPI) — Little Paul Jayson would call his father a "pig" and tell him to "drop dead" and "shut your face."

In the morning, he would kick on dad's bedroom door and then throw cold water on him when he emerged.

The father, Martin Jayson, 54, told a court Tuesday it had gone far enough. He wanted back the right to spank.

Jayson had pledged not to lay a hand on his wife or Paul, 10, last April when he separated from the family by moving upstairs.

It was then, Jayson's lawyer said, that Paul turned into "a little horror."

"He is completely out of hand," the lawyer said, "and treats his father as someone who doesn't exist ... The father feels that unless he is released from his (no-spank) undertaking, there will be no way of controlling the boy."

Besides, he added, Jayson's health is suffering as a result — he is depressed and has a rapid heartbeat.

Aussies Blast Meg

SYDNEY — Princess Margaret snubbed government officials and looked drawn, pale and bored at the start of her two-week tour of Australia, a Sydney newspaper said today. The Daily Telegraph, in a front-page report from Canberra, said the princess threw royal tour officials there into a panic by disregarding her schedule. "Disappointed children, sad mums and embarrassed federal ministers were left in the lurch as the princess whizzed through her first day's program in the Australian capital territory," the report said.

CHILPANCINGO, Mexico — Eliseo Victorino and Pedro Morales concluded after a few tequilas that they should go home and beat their wives to "demonstrate that International Women's Year is inoperative." Eliseo stumbled home, tore the crossbar off the door, and set upon his wife, Gloria, while Pedro picked up a frying pan and threw it at his spouse, Maria. Neighbors called police. Both ended up in adjoining cells. Who won? "It was an honorable draw," the two bricklayers answered.

BOSTON — Charles Kropp won't be picking up the $1,000,000 prize he won in the Massachusetts state lottery draw Wednesday. He died July 26.

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's mental condition is improving, sources who spoke to her court-appointed psychiatrists report. Judge Oliver Carter Wednesday set Nov. 4 for a court hearing to determine if Hearst is mentally competent to stand trial on armed robbery charges.

Nixon Eyes Career On the Air

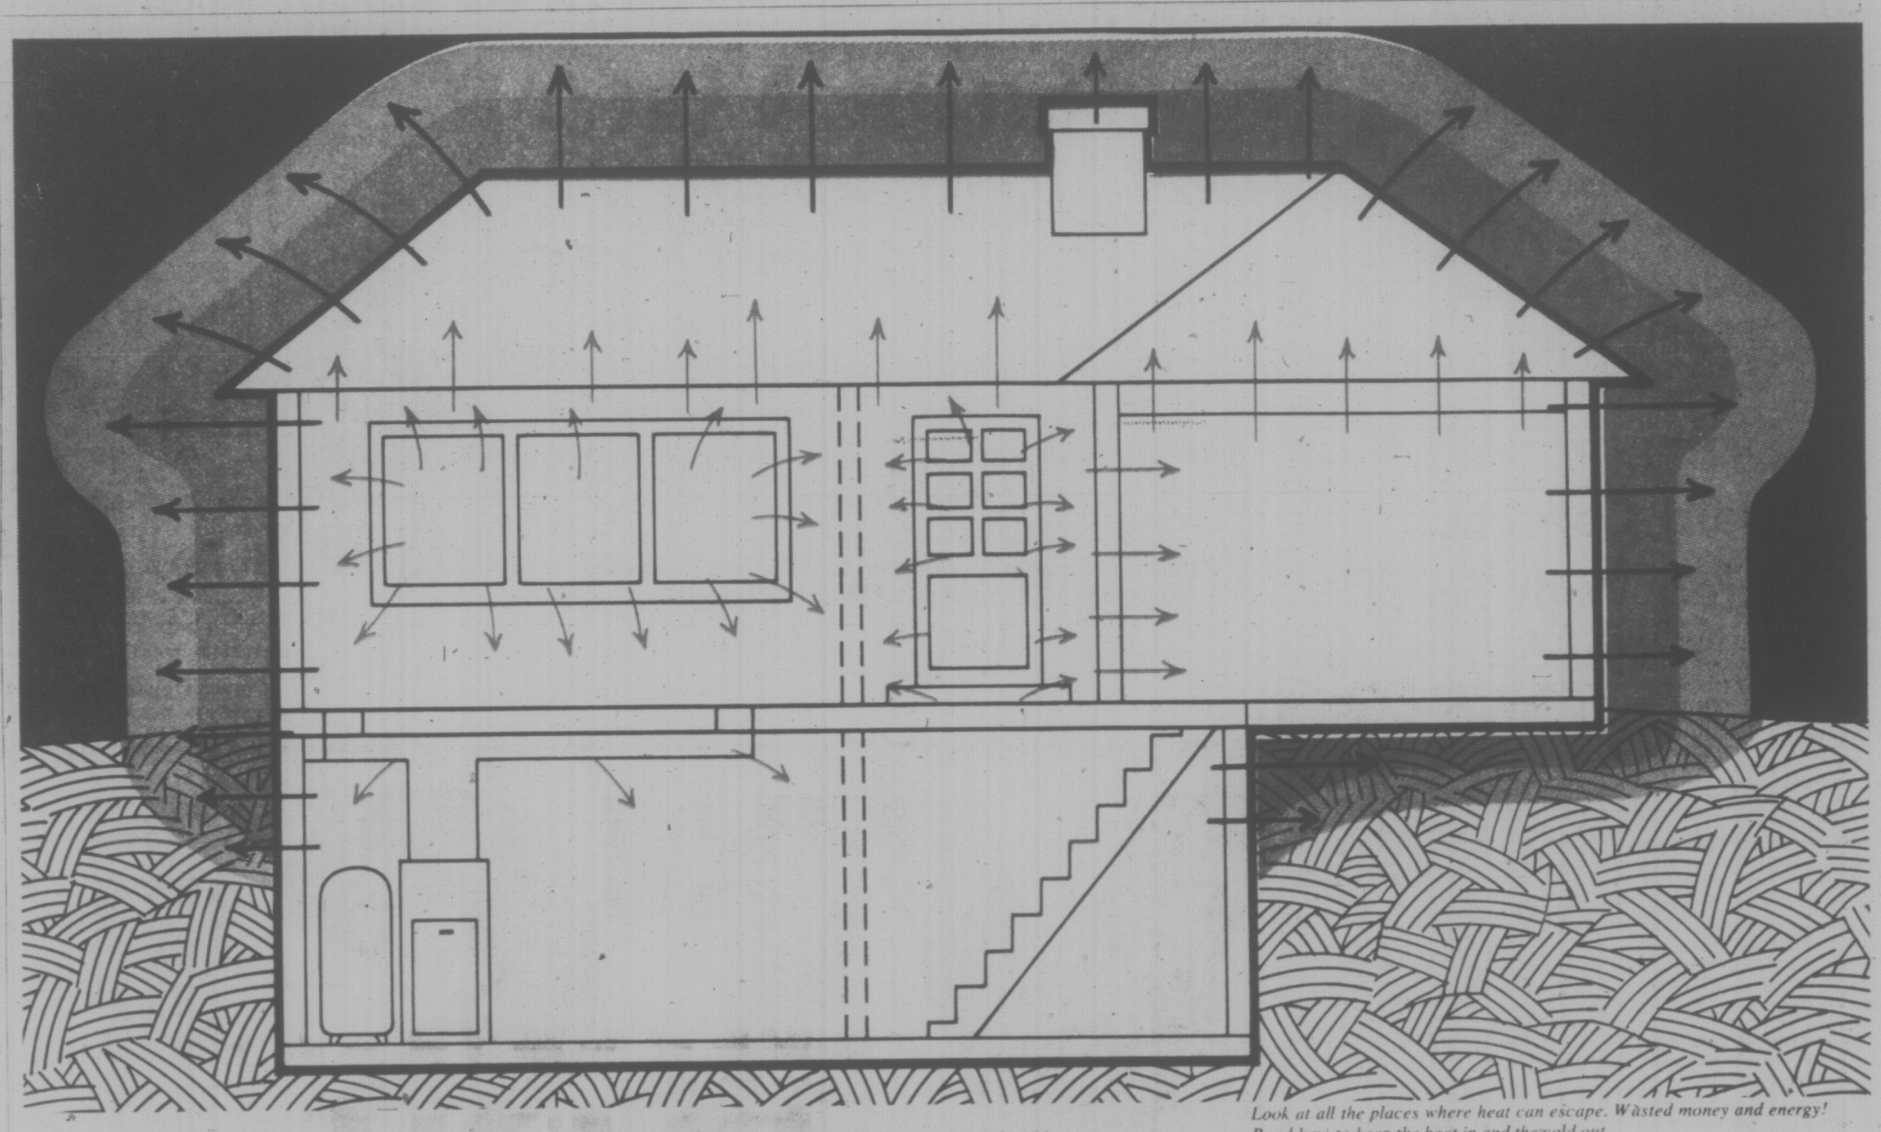
LOS ANGELES — Richard Nixon, reportedly considering becoming a broadcast commentator on international affairs, says other presidents for years had Watergate-style operations: "much worse" than those in his administration.

Nixon blames his downfall on biased liberals in the news media exaggerating "a stupid mistake" of the kind that was tolerated in other presidents, according to television producer Wally George.

George said Wednesday he was invited recently to Nixon's San Clemente retreat, where they discussed the possibility of Nixon becoming a broadcaster in the style of Ronald Reagan, whose radio programs and newspaper columns have provided the former California governor with an important platform.

ITALIAN WINS NOBEL AWARD

STOCKHOLM — Eugenio Montale, a 79-year-old Italian poet, today was awarded the 1975 Nobel Prize in Literature. Montale, whose name few have heard outside of Italy, was popular in the 1920s and 1930s. His last collection of poems was published almost 20 years ago.



Look at all the places where heat can escape. Wasted money and energy! Read how to keep the heat in and the cold out.

Are you heating your home or the great Canadian outdoors?

Heat sneaks out through the ceiling, through windows and doors and tiny cracks. So you end up paying a lot more than you should for fuel. Here are some ideas to help you hold onto your heat – and your money.

CANADA'S ENERGY problems haven't reached the crisis stage, but why wait for that? Let's avoid that possibility by making some savings now.

Start by turning down the thermostat. Check that your furnace is working well. Have a furnace tune-up at least once a year.

Here are 5 more easy ways to save on home heating by keeping the heat in and the cold out.

Insulation pays for itself several times over.

A great many Canadian homes don't have enough insulation. On a dull day, does snow melt on your roof? Does snow disappear from around the walls of your house? Both are warning signs of excessive heat loss.

A thorough reinsulation job can cut your annual fuel bill by up to 50%. Even a modest improvement can save you 20% – $80 on an annual heating bill of $400.

Ceilings should have 6" or more of mineral wool or glass fibre insulation. Wall cavities should be completely filled and basement walls protected to 2 feet below grade level. (To avoid fire hazards, don't use foamed plastic insulation in exposed applications.)

Insulation comes in many forms, but the standard measure of the insulating properties of a product is the resistance value – the "R" value – marked on most products. The higher the "R" value, the better the insulation. Materials are light and easy to handle, so you may be able to do the job yourself.

Bonus: To encourage us to keep the heat in, the Federal Government has dropped the federal sales tax on all insulation and weather-stripping materials, double-pane windows, storm windows and storm doors.

For some free advice, see pages 45 to 74 in 100 Ways to Save Energy and Money in the Home. It contains a step-by-step guide to types of insulation, recommended levels for different locations in the home and installation tips.

Use storm windows and doors.

As much as 25% of your heat loss is through windows and doors. Tighten them up.

When you're putting in new windows, install double glazing.

Put on storm windows; they'll cut window loss by 50%. And if you don't want a room with a view, tack plastic sheeting over your windows.

That 1/4" crack is big trouble.

If you think that weather-stripping and caulking are too much trouble, remember that a 1/4" crack along the bottom of a door is exactly the same as a 3" x 3" hole in your living room wall. You wouldn't ignore that!

How tightly should you seal your house? Stop when you find that in cold weather a light fog or mist develops on windows on the downwind side. Most homes have a long way to go to reach this point.

Use solar energy.

It makes sense to use the sun's energy. It's free.

Through the winter, open curtains and drapes during the bright part of the day to let the sun in and close them at night for their insulating value.

Check the escape routes.

Keep your garage door closed. Shut your basement door so the cooler air stays down below. Take a look at your milk chute and mail slot to be sure they're not letting heat sneak out.

Saving energy can save us all.

It's a fact of life that we face possible shortages and soaring prices in just a few years. We must stop wasting energy.

Moderated consumption now, plus planned development of our resources, can protect our way of life far into the future. But we must start now!

TWO FREE BOOKS: The Billpayer's Guide to Furnace Servicing shows you how to save money and Canada's energy resources by proper furnace servicing. It explains what you can do, and what your serviceman should do. Free when you send in the coupon below.

Mexican Saga with Pig's Head, Hominy, Crumpets

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK — Question: What do 50 pounds of unslaken lime, a pound of dried whole hominy, four pigs' heads, crumpets and English muffins add up to?

Answer: A weekend with Diana Kennedy.

This saga began about three months ago when, during the course of a visit to Mexico, we dined with the British-born Diana at a market in Guadalajara.

The dish of the day was pozole, a profoundly Mexican dish of which we have long been especially fond. Its two principal components happen to be dried hominy and the cooked flesh of a pig's head.

Diana is an authority on Mexican cooking and the author of the excellent The Cuisines of Mexico (Harper & Rox, 1972) and the forthcoming and long-awaited The Tortilla Book (Harper & Row, $4.95 paperback, $10 hard cover).

It must be added that Mexican dinner was prefaced by an exceedingly piquant and tasty clam cocktail made with fresh jalapeno peppers and little-neck clams fresh from the local market.

POZOLE DE JALISCO

(A pork and hominy soup or stew)

1 pound whole dried hominy
2 teaspoons unslaked lime, optional
½ pig's head, three pounds or less
1½ pounds pork tenderloin or boneless fresh pork butt
1 pound pork neck bones
2 cups dried, small, hot red pepper pods, about three ounces
Salt to taste
2 cups finely chopped onion
16 radishes, trimmed and thinly sliced
3 cups chopped or shredded crisp lettuce
16 lime wedges

1. Approximately two days before this dish is to be made, place the hominy in a deep bowl and add cold water to cover. If the lime is to be used, drain the hominy, add more water to cover and bring to the boil. Dilute the lime in a little cold water and add it through a strainer to the hominy. Boil 10 minutes.

Cover and let soak half an hour. Rinse the hominy in numerous changes of cold water to remove all traces of lime. Rub the corn between the hands so that the thin transparent sheath surrounding each kernel is removed. If the lime is not used, carefully remove the peaked "beak" of each kernel and the thin transparent sheath.

2. The night before the dish is to be prepared, place the pig's head in a kettle and add cold water to cover. Cut the pork tenderloin into large serving pieces and add to the pig's head. Add the neck bones and let soak overnight.

3. Cover the red pepper pods with cold water and soak overnight.

4. Drain the hominy and add cold, unsalted water to cover. Bring to the boil and cook, uncovered, until the kernels "open up" like a flower, about one hour. Skim the surface as necessary.

5. Meanwhile, cover the head with fresh unsalted water and bring to the boil, uncovered, until the meat can be removed from the bone, about one hour. Do not overcook for the meat will cook longer with the hominy. Set aside to cool. Reserve the cooking liquid.

6. When the head is cool enough to handle, remove all the meat and skin from the bones. Discard the bones. Cut the meat and skin into serving pieces. Cut the ear into pieces. There should be at least one piece for each guest.

7. Add the meat from the head and the cooking broth to the hominy. Add salt to taste. Cook, uncovered, about four hours over very low heat. Skim the fat from the surface as necessary and, if the dish becomes too dry, add boiling water as necessary.

8. Pour the red peppers and their liquid into a blender and blend thoroughly.

9. Serve the meat and hominy along with the hot pepper sauce and remaining ingredients as garnish.

Yield: 12 to 14 servings.

TORTILLA AND CHORIZO
(Dry Soup)

12 tortillas, preferably left over from a day or two earlier
1 tablespoon melted lard or peanut oil
2 chorizo sausages, skinned and crumbled (see note)
1¼ cups skinned and chopped fresh red, ripe tomatoes or imported canned tomatoes
¼ cup finely chopped onion
Peanut oil for shallow frying
1 cup fresh or canned pork or chicken broth
2 sprigs fresh mint, chopped or about one teaspoon crumbled dried mint leaves
½ cup crumbled farmer cheese
½ cup thinly sliced onion.

1. Cut the tortillas into thin strips.

2. Heat the lard and add the chorizos. Cook, stirring, about four minutes. Drain the meat and set aside. Reserve the cooking fat.

3. Combine the tomatoes and onion in a blender and blend. Heat about one tablespoon of the chorizo fat in a skillet and add the tomato mixture. Cook, stirring, about three minutes. Set aside.

4. Heat the peanut oil to a depth of about half an inch. Add the tortilla strips, about one-third at a time, and cook until wilted and starting to stiffen but without browning. Drain on absorbent toweling.

5. Combine the tortilla pieces with the tomato sauce in a saucepan. Add the chorizoe, broth, mint and salt. Cook gently, stirring occasionally and gently, about five to eight minutes. Garnish with the cheese and sliced onions and serve immediately.

Yield: Four servings.

Recipe Pays Tribute To Parsnips, Carrots

By MARY MOORE

As I handwrite this the morning newscaster is telling me we are to have a 'killing" frost tonight. So I have to rescue my second crop green beans, green peppers, tomatoes and begonias. But not those lovely steadfast carrots, beets, parsnips and turnips.

Root vegetables are a comfort to gardeners. Shoppers find them on the whole a little lower in price than above-ground vegetables and today I am paying tribute to parsnips and carrots.

GLAZED PARSNIPS AND CARROTS

NOTE: This method may be used with parsnips only or carrots only but obviously you would double the amount of either — that is if all parsnips are used you need six; if all carrots were used you need six.

Scrub 3 medium parsnips and 3 medium carrots. The parsnips should be pared with vegetable peeler. Carrots do not require paring. Cut all vegetables into 1" chunks. Cook in small amount of boiling salted water until they BEGIN to get tender — about 12 minutes. (Do not overcook or they will break in the next glazing step.) Drain.

Over medium-high heat melt ¼-cup butter or margarine with 2 tablespoons light brown sugar and 1 tablespoon FINELY chopped parsley. Carefully add drained parsnip and carrot chunks and turn them almost constantly in this glaze for about 5 minutes until they become an even golden brown. Beautiful and different for an economical guest meal.

KYOTO CARROTS
(serves 4)

NOTE: This method was given to me by my cousin Irene who with her husband was posted to Japan.

Scrub 4 medium carrots and patiently cut into 3" shoestring strips. Cook in ¾ cup boiling water with 1 tablespoon soy sauce until just tender. You may find that almost all liquid has evaporated. When about to serve, if desired, add a little butter BUT without the butter this is an ideal vegetable for reducers.

Braised Beef Provencale

(4 Portions)

3 lbs. blade steak, cut into 1½" cubes
3 tablespoons oil
1 cup beef stock
2 tablespoons flour
2 medium size onions, thinly sliced
½ lb. mushrooms, cut into 4
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
½ cup beer
1 small green pepper, coarsely diced salt and pepper
4 scallions, diced

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Place two tablespoons of oil in an oven-proof casserole, over high heat. When the oil is very hot, add the cubed meat, and brown them. Only brown a few cubes at a time. Sprinkle the flour onto the beef cubes and brown the flour for 4 to 5 minutes. Stir occasionally. Gradually pour the beef stock into the casserole, while stirring; season to taste with salt and pepper.

Place the remaining tablespoon of oil in a separate saute pan. When the oil is hot, add the sliced onions and cook, uncovered, until they are transparent, over medium heat. Add the mushrooms, garlic and green pepper and saute for another two minutes. Add the beer to the vegetables and reduce the liquid by one-half, over high-heat. Season well, and pour the vegetables and liquid into the casserole. Mix well, then bring the liquid in the casserole to a boil. Cover the casserole and bake the beef for 1½ hours, in the preheated oven. When the beef is done, saute the sliced scallions in ½ tablespoon of peanut oil, and garnish with scallions.

NUTRITION BUYLINE

Teens Need More Iron

QUESTION: I have read in an advertisement for a vegetable juicer that vegetable juices are more nutritious than the vegetables themselves. Is this true?

ANSWER: The nutritive values of vegetable juices and vegetables are approximately the same. Whole vegetables are an important source of bulk in the diet.

QUESTION: The Nutrition Canada Survey showd that the iron intakes of teenage girls were close to inadequate. How can I be certain that my 14-year-old daughter is meeting her iron requirement?

ANSWER: Teenage girls require 14 mgs. of iron daily. Good food sources of iron are whole grained and enriched cereal products, eggs, meat and poultry (especially organ meats, beans, peas, greens, apricots, prunes and raisins).

QUESTION: How long can "leftover" foods be left in the refrigerator?

ANSWER: The object of simple refrigeration is to reduce the temperature of foods to about 42 degrees Farenheit. At this temperature organisms inducing spoilage are inhibited. Enzymatic action, which causes excessive ripening and deterioration in fresh foods is also stopped at this temperature.

Refrigeration preserves the quality of food and prevents spoilage, but it cannot do these things indefinitely, as food quality and nutritive valde slowly deteriorate at these temperatures. Food should be held in the refrigerator, not stored indefinitely.

Cooked meat, if promptly refrigerated, can probably be held safely for a week; however, there will be small losses of thiamine upon reheating. There is little if any nutrient loss when meat is served cold without reheating. Cooked vegetables, on the other hand, rapidly lose ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) when held.

After refrigeration for 24 hours, cooked vegetables have three-fourths as much ascorbic acid as when freshly cooked; after being kept for 48 hours they have only two-thirds as much. It is best not to keep leftover vegetables for longer than a day or two.

Tips on Buying Beef in Quantity

elizabeth forbes

Thursday is one of two days in a week in which the family pages of this newspaper are given over to foods and recipes.

All except my column, which at times (on a Thursday) looks as if it might have got mixed up with those recipes and food articles, quite by accident.

With that in mind, I decided this Thursday, to conform to the over-all idea and to give you a run down on how to buy large quantities of beef.

Now, don't get the wrong idea. I never buy beef in large quantities. And as for knowing all the different cuts in a side of beef, I'm a dead loss.

Extent of my knowledge centres on ground round, stewing beef, an occasional small steak and, if I'm having someone to dinner, a sirloin tip roast.

Don't worry though. The information I'm going to pass on to you here, is authentic and up-to-date.

I found it in the September issue of Consumer Contact, a leaflet put out regularly by the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs.

So get out your reading glasses, sit back in your chairs and absorb this common sense advice on how to buy large quantities of beef.

First, we are told there are three alternatives available in purchasing beef: buyng a side or a quarter; buying wholesale cuts such as the loin, hip or chuck or buying retail cuts.

Be prepared therefore to use all cuts, from steaks to stewing beef, if you want a bulk purchase of beef to be profitable.

If your family will only eat tender cuts, from the rib and loin section, there is no point in buying a side or front quarter, the pamphlet says.

It also slips in this bit of advice that "less tender cuts, from the chuck, shank, brisket, plate and flank can be just as tasty as more expensive cuts if cooked properly."

Of course, you must be willing to take the time to cook these cuts by slow, moist heat — stewing, braising, pot roasting or pressure cooking.

Next there's another bit of advice, to remember when buying meat for a freezer, that you are paying for the hanging weight of the carcass — the weight before the meat is cut and the bone and the fat trimmed. Therefore, there will be approximately 25 per cent waste.

It is also well to remember that a front quarter has a higher proportion of less tender cuts than a hind quarter. So a front quarter "may sell at 10 to 12 cents less per pound than a side and a hind quarter may sell at 10 to 15 cents per pound more than a side."

A good hint passed on in this leaflet is to "check to see if the price of cutting, wrapping and quick-freezing is included in the cost per pound you were quoted."

Quick freezing ensures the quality and safety of the meat. If the butcher does not have the facilities for quick-freezing, make sure you have adequate space to do so before buying in bulk.

"You cannot freeze more than 50 pounds of meat in a 16 cubic foot freezer in 24 hours," the leaflet warns.

If you are not interested in all the cuts that come with a side or quarter, or if your freezer storage space is inadequate, consider buying a wholesale cut.

Since many consumers are unfamiliar with cuts of meat, Agriculture Canada has issued a leaflet entitled "Beef Cuts". It illustrates all the wholesale cuts, and the retail cuts and their cooking methods.

Free copies are available by writing to Information Divison, Agriculture Canada, Ottawa, K1A 0CT.

Remember, Consumer Contact urges, if you purchase a side, quarter, or wholesale cut, "make sure you are dealing with someone who is honest and experienced in the beef business . . . it is difficult for the average consumer to judge if he or she is getting a good deal on the bulk purchase."

Also, if you are purchasing from a butcher, make sure that the side, quarter or wholesale cut is marked with the "Canada Approved" or "Canada" stamp.

This guarantees that the meat has been checked by Agriculture Canada inspectors and is fit for human consumption.

"Grading is your guide to quality," the leaflet says. "If the meat has been graded by an Agriculture Canada inspector, it will have a brown square mark on the main wholesale cuts of the carcass and a ribbonlike grade mark appearing on each wholesale cut.

The color indicates the grade: Red, Canada A; Blue, Canada B; Brown, Canda C; Black, Canada D.

The article concludes with the information that length of time beef can be frozen varies with the type of cut, the method of wrapping, and the freezer temperature.

If roasts and steaks are wrapped in airtight packages they will retain their quality for 10-12 months at 18 degrees C (0 degrees F) or lower. Ground beef keeps two to three months.

With all this information you should now sit down and consider the pros and cons. Will you by a side? A quarter? A wholesale cut or a retail cut? It's up to you.

As for me, I'm happy that, for once, I've been able to fit comfortably into the food and recipe columns of these family pages on a Thursday night.

Thanks to the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs and its leaflet — Consumer Contact.

OLD CBC-TV PROGRAMS CAN BE BORROWED

OTTAWA (CP) — Schools, libraries and other organizations can borrow CBC television programs from the National Film Board (NFB) under a program announced by the secretary of state department.

The department said in a statement that the lending service, through which about 90 hours of CBC programs will be distributed free of charge, follows the NFB's practice of selling television programs.

Next year about 150 hours of programming should be available as well as radio programming, the statement said.

Available in French and English, the shows include The Living Arctic, The Children of Our Time, and Technoflash.

One day, when you dry yourself after a shower or bath, you might notice a lump in one of your breasts. Don't panic. Over 80 per cent of these lumps are non-malignant. If they are cysts or non-cancerous lumps, they don't represent a health hazard. But, to make sure, see your doctor without delay.

The 6-page folder What About a Lump in The Breast? states that this year some 7,000 Canadian women will develop breast cancer. Whether their lives can be saved will depend on how soon these growths were detected and treated.

The folder also tells you the various diagnostic methods your doctor may use to establish the nature of the lump.

With the help of diagrams and explantory text "Breast self-examination" explains how this type of examination is done. Every woman, particularly those past child-bearing age and those with a history of breast cancer in the family, should examine their breasts once every month. The early detection of any unusual development in the breasts may be vital.

It is also worth remembering that, as a rule, breast cancer develops without the victim feeling any pain.

Both folders are available from your local chapter of the Canadian Cancer Society. The address is in your telephone book. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

dear abby

Unhappy Hooker

DEAR ABBY: I am a direct descendant of General Joseph Hooker, who served valiantly in the Civil War.

I do not know how my family name became a synonym for prostitute, but I find it very offensive.

There are numerous other Hookers who are respectable, law-abiding citizens, and I am sure I speak for them when I say we Hookers are slandered by this commonly accepted, immoral connotation.

I have two daughters and a son, and the girls especially have been embarrassed numerous times by people who have made jokes about their being a couple of "hookers."

My son is seriously considering changing his name because his fiancee doesn't want to be a "Hooker," and she says if she has daughters, she doesn't want them to be "Hookers," either.

Am I overly sensitive? Or have I a point?

A PROUD HOOKER

DEAR PROUD: You have a point. Little can be done about thoughtless people who use your family name as a synonym for a woman of the streets, but I'll print your letter as a reminder. Also, if your son wants to change his name, it's his privilege.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a slightly flabby male in my mid-30s who occasionally wears a corset under a turtleneck or other outfit where a "midriff bulge" gives me a particularly unsightly appearance. It's not too uncomfortable, and it greatly improves the way I look.

When someone once asked me how I "lost" so much weight, I made the mistake of telling him the truth about the corset. Now I'm the butt of jokes from some of the guys at work.

What's wrong with a man wearing a corset or some kind of girdle? Men aren't ashamed to wear padded shoulders, elevated shoes and hair pieces. They have as much right as women to do whatever is necessary to improve their appearance. Yet when a man buys any kind of a support to firm up his stomach, he lies about it and says it's doctor's orders for a bad back.

What do you think about this, Abby? Women want equality. Well, so do men!

PALO

DEAR PAL: For my part, a man can wear anything he wants to wear for any reason. And if he's concerned about what others think, he's making a problem where none exists.

Cooking for Two: Planning a Must

Cooking for two may conjure up a romantic image of dinner by flowers and candlelight, but in reality it often poses problems due to the lack of practical two-serving recipes. No one wants to be faced with a refrigerator full of leftovers and risk wasting costly food. Advance planning plus intelligent food shopping is required, as it is easy to over-spend.

Because meat is the biggest single item in the food budget, it deserves special attention. When buying, compare on the basis of cost per serving rather than cost per pound.

A medium-size roast is not out of the question for a two-some. Leftovers from a roast beef dinner will make hearty stews, sandwiches, salads, casseroles and meat pies. The following tips suggest economy in terms of both time and money.

Buy enough meat for more than one recipe when a longer preparation time is needed to make a product such as meat loaf. Portion it into individual meat loaves, meat balls or patties and freeze in packages of two-serving sizes.

Serve canned meats hot or cold. The cost per serving may be quite reasonable since every ounce is edible.

Fruits and vegetables for two need not be a problem. Buy fresh produce in season but only as much as you can eat before it spoils. Freezing eliminates the "leftover" problem as you cook only the amount needed. A frozen block of fruits or vegetables, that serves four, can be cut in half with a sharf knife.

Canned and packaged foods can be a real boon to your cooking problems. Large sizes are good buys only when you use all the food while its still in top condition. Here are a few hints for using canned and packaged foods.

Divide gelatin dessert powders, pudding and dehydrated soup mixes to give two servings at a time. For accuracy, stir the mix, measure and divide, and reduce the liquid proportionately. Mark on the envelope, how many servings are left.

Use biscuit mixes (homemade are less expensive) and refrigerated cookie dough. Prepare what you need and save the rest.

Serve canned soup as a first course one night; then use the leftovers as a sauce over vegetables or in a casserole the next.

Use leftover juices and syrups from canned goods. For example, heat and thicken leftover syrup and spoon over pancakes or baked ham, make a sauce for pudding or cake, combine with other juices for a beverage or use in fruit gelatin desserts.

Recipes designed for two eliminate many problems. Food Advisory Services, suggests two such recipes. "Chicken Sukiyaki," served piping hot over a bed of fluffy rice, converts a leftover breast of chicken into a tangy or oriental dish. With apples plentiful and a good buy, you will want to try "Sausages 'n' Apples." Easy to prepare, it can be the basis of a nutritious meal in a matter of minutes.

CHICKEN SUKIYAKI

1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 teaspoon sugar
Dash salt
1 whole chicken breast, deboned
2 teaspoons oil
½ cup diagonally sliced celery
2 small onions, sliced thin
1 cup sliced mushrooms

Combine soy sauce, juice, sugar and salt. Bring to boil and cool. Cut chicken in 2 by 1 by ½-inch strips. Saute in oil one minute. Add vegetables and sauce and cook 7 minutes more. Serve over rice. Makes two 1-cup servings.

SAUSAGES 'N' APPLES

½ pound link sausage
1 large apple, peeled, cored and sliced
1 tablespoon brown sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt

Arrange sausages in baking dish and bake 20 minutes at 400 degrees F. turning occasionally. Drain off fat. Top with apple and sprinkle with brown sugar and salt. Bake 5 to 10 minutes more. Serve with rice or noodles. 2 servings.

Butterscotch Oat Squares

¼ cup butter
1 cup dark brown sugar
3 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
¼ tsp. salt

In an eight by eight-inch or nine by nine-inch square pan over LOW heat barely melt the butter.

Meanwhile mix together in a rather large bowl the brown sugar, oatmeal and salt. Stir in the melted butter until blended. Tip the whole business back into the buttered pan and pat and pack with palms and fingers until even and firm. Bake at 350 deg. F.hr. fifteen minutes. While still hot mark deeply into even squares using a ruler as your guide while cutting. (NOTE: If you have used a teflon pan be sure to use a plastic cutting utensil.) Let cool, then break into squares.

Nollie pleaded guilty to the charge.

He was arrested with a .22-calibre semi-automatic pistol June 14 after a complaint he had chased someone from his property with a gun.

"It strikes me this gentleman shouldn't be running around with a .22," said Judge Alder.

Anthony Hugh Allen, who stole two steaks was given a year's probation to attend a Colwood alternative youth program, and told to perform 16 hours of community service.

Allen, 18, of 1090 Goldstream, took $4.84 worth of meat from Westen Foods, 772 Goldstream, on Oct. 17.

He pleaded guilty.

Franklin Charles Stephenson, 21, of 405 Cathgrine, told the court he was on valium at the time, and was fined $300.

Other fines for impaired driving were imposed on David Joseph Reid, 38, of 4715 Eales Rd. $400; and Leah Craven, 19, of 1167 Colville, $300.

Magazine Rule Seen 'Disastrous'

MONTREAL (CP) — Legislation dictating Canadian content regulations for Reader's Digest could set a precedent adversely affecting other foreign editions, Paul Zimmerman, president of Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd., said Wednesday.

Zimmerman told reporters that other governments might pass stricter content regulations, threatening the existence of the foreign editions.

Meanwhile, Revenue Minister Bud Cullen denied a report that he will present a tougher definition of what constitutes a Canadian magazine to the federal cabinet today. "That's just speculation," he said in an interview.

The report said Canadian magazines will have to have 75- to 80-per-cent Canadian content or that the same percentage must be substantially different from material published in other editions.

Zimmerman said such a ruling would be disastrous for Reader's Digest because much of the magazine's content is purchased from other publications.

Cullen said there is no guarantee that cabinet today will discuss tax changes affecting magazines such as Time and Reader's Digest.

Zimmerman said the Canadian edition of Reader's Digest has almost 30 per cent Canadian content and would be able to extend it to 40 per cent.

Tanaka—Japan's Richard Nixon—Making a Comeback

By JOHN SAAR

TOKYO (WP) — Kanuei Tanaka, the Richard Nixon of Japanese politics is making a comeback. Forced to resign the premiership in scandal and disgrace only 11 months ago, Tanaka is again the kingmaker, chief paymaster and most powerful figure in the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

He is a leading member of the Diet (Parliament) heads the largest faction of Diet members in the LDP and is widely known to be aiming at a return to public office, perhaps even as prime minster someday.

The reviving fortunes of the man whose fall from grace paralleled and seemed as total as ex-President Nixon's defied all predictions except his own, even in the melancholic and exhausted depths of his post-resignation depression. He reportedly told associates "I am coming back."

On the advice of those same loyal lieutenants, Tanaka maintains a low political profile. His public appearances are few and carefully chosen for sympathetic impact as in his direction of former Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's funeral. Behind the scenes, Tanaka is actively running his faction through surrogates and manouvering against the weak administration of Prime Minister Miki, whose timely resignaion last year from Tanaka's government contributed to his downfall.

Tokyo University Professor Shinnichi Eto gives Tanaka a 70 per cent chance of regaining the premieership eventually: "I don't like it personally, but he can come back."

Tanaka's strategy, according to Eto and other political supporters, is to overthrow Miki's leadership of the LDP, and support an interim prime minister to prepare for his own return to power.

"Currently," Eto remarked, "he is making complicated clandestine moves to destroy the stabilty of the Prime Minister Miki."

Tanaka refused to be interviewed, but a highly placed bureaucrat and Tanaka supporter confirmed that the man once known as "the computerized bulldozer" worries about Japan's future and would again like to play a role.

When Tanaka resigned last November he cited his "persoal shame," and apologized for bringing down a "torrent of rain," on the country. Most people felt he faced obscurity, an ignominious exit from all political life and possibly criminal prosecution. The instrument of his downfall in what was known as Japan's mini-Watergate was a 60-page expose in an obscure literary journal, accusing Tanaka of shady land dealings and the evasion of income taxes through bogus companies.

Co-author of the expose Takashi Tachibana who, once thought Tanaka was finished has changed his mind, "I am dismayed and confused. He is coming back . . ."

He now believes that Tanaka's resignation was a trade-off for a halt in the investigation of the former prime minister's alleged wrongdoings. Others of a less conspiratorial bent believe that the resignation and loss of face were punishment enough and that a pressing of charges under the Miki administration would reek of persecution.

There are also dark rumors of money changing hands and evidence being destroyed. Whatever the reasons, the investigations have "vaporized," according to one bemused veteran newsman.

Tanaka has "purified" his reputation somewhat by paying $140,000 in back taxes. He also moved to head off a civil suit by offering to give a piece of disputed land to the state.

Although the similarities between the Nixon and Tanaka cases were often noted, the points of difference explain Tanaka's survival.

A handsome man with a pugnacious jaw and raucous speech, Tanaka is widely liked both for his colorful personality and his blunt vigor. Where the American public felt faintly uncomfortable with Richard Nixon, the Japanese accepted the charismatic Tanaka.

Unlike Nixon who fought to the last, Tanaka resigned early and cut his losses. The flow of embarrassing revelations stopped, the steam went out of the investigations and the damage was limited. In Tanaka's case, say his defenders, there was no conspiracy to subvert the constitution, no criminal prosecution and no pardon.

TANAKA
. . . punished enough?

The version of events now being peddled by pro-Tanaka people depicts him as a genius who fell prey to the jealousy of his establishment rivals. — Tanaka is a poorly-educated, selfmade millionaire — and the misfortune to be in office when the oil crisis sent inflation in Japan soaring 25 per cent.

Foreign observers and many Japanese critics believe the key to Tanaka's rise and his present resurgence is a five-letter word, money. Japanese politics are so thoroughly permeated with money-power corruption that almost no politician is untainted.

"Normally, decent politicians are regarded as incompetent," remarked a noted academic. "Mature people tend to think that every able person has some corruption."

Throughout his career, Tanaka was known as the most blatant and shrewd dispenser of money in politics. One professor remembers Tanaka telling him, "I have no education and you have a good one. That is your strength and my weakness. I have money and you have none." And that, Tanaka is said to have added with a guffaw, "Is my strength and your weakness." The professor ended the anecdote by recalling that he refused a gift.

In postwar Japanese politics, the death of failure of the leader led to the dissolution of his faction. Tanaka's faction not only remains intact with 94 Diet members at present, but is adding new recruits every month. With pay and allowances of approximately one million yen a month, Diet members are expected to spend around two million yen a month to keep their constituencies sweet. Tanaka, from his own wealth, and access to fund-raisers, supports his faction-members more generously than any other political leader. "Money," observed a political correspondent, "is a good glue."

The Japanese political structure of factions, or subparties within parties has worked strongly in Tanaka's favor. Historically, the biggest faction controls the LDP and is in position to demand a proportionate number of cabinet seats.

Faction members who defect to another group lose seniority and so delay or perhaps destroy their own chances of a ministerial post. So, bound together by political money and self-interest, the Tanaka Faction members who defect to another group lose seniority and so delay or perhaps destroy their own chances of a ministerial post. So, bound together by political money and self-interest, the Tanaka faction constitutes a Tanaka's influence extends far beyond politics. Tentacles reach back to his financial backers — mostly small and medium-size businessmen — into the academic world, the formidable, bargaining strength in the backstage struggles now going on on the LDP. When Tanaka judges the time is right for a return to open activity, the faction will be a powerful base. bureaucracies and the press. The committed Tanaka men have everything to gain from his return.

The prospects, they feel, are favorable. At 57, healthy, vigorous and full of ideas, Tanaka is still a potentially attractive and youthful leader of the LDP which has lost votes, self-confidence and faith in his rivals over the last few years. In a time of recession there is even nostalgia for the big-spending inflationary policies which marked Tanaka's eventful 29-month rule.

When the question of his return to major office is debated, morality will play a small role according to experts here. The issue is whether a refurbished Tanaka and his powerful, supporters are an electoral plus or minus.

Employee 'Guilty' Of Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daniel Gillis Carlson will be sentenced Nov. 14 on a charge of stealing almost $900,000 in cheques and cash from International Harvester Co. of Canada.

Carlson pleaded not guilty to the charge, but was convicted Wednesday in County Court.

Court was told that a series of intended bank deposits in cheques and cash totalling $895,767 were made out at the firm's Vancouver office from July 8, 1973 to April 30, 1974, but were never recorded at the bank.

At the time, Carlson worked in the firm's department where deposits were made up.

Court was told that payment was stopped on all but $3,000 of the missing cheques and all but $9,000 of the cash was recovered.

Railways Eye Freight Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang says he hopes that CP Rail and Canadian National Railways are reviewing proposed increases in freight rates in view of the government's anti-inflation guides.

Lang was asked by Crawford Douglas (L—Bruce-Grey) whether the government would consider taking action to halt the proposed increase of 15 per cent effective Nov. 15, which would be the fourth this year.

Douglas said the Ontario Beef Improvement Association was concerned about the increase because of previous raises in freight rates totalling 49 per cent this year.

Direct Flights To Islands

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada and Air France announced Tuesday they will begin direct air service Nov. 3 between Montreal and the French Caribbean islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique.

It will be the first direct scheduled service between Canada and the French Antilles.

The two airlines said equipment, personnel and ground services in Montreal will be supplied initially by Air Canada while ground service on the two islands will be provided by Air France.

Venus Probe Sizzled After Sending Pictures

Times News Services

MOSCOW — Western scientists said today the Soviet Union's latest Venus probe has apparently been destroyed by the planet's crushing atmospheric pressure and heat hot enough to melt lead.

But one of the experts described as "extremely valuable and interesting" the ground-level pictures sent back by Venus 9, a capsule that parachuted to the fiery, cloud-covered Venusian landscape Wednesday morning.

The four-month, the 26 million-mile flight was part of a double-barreled probe by the Soviet Union to the earth's nearest planetary neighbor.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said Venus 10, which began its flight June 14 — six days after its sister ship — was expected to reach the planet Saturday.

Tass said Venus 9 transmitted technical data for 53 minutes after landing — three minutes longer than a Soviet capsule that touched down in 1972 and 30 minutes longer than the first soft landing in 1970.

Western scientists said the first two instrument packages were believed to have been crushed by atmospheric pressure 80 times that on earth.

The scientists said the probes were apparently burned to a crisp by temperatures that reach more than 500 degrees celsius, more than three times the melting point of lead.

Tass made no mention of information transmitted by Venus 9 after the 53 minutes, leading the scientists to speculate the new probe suffered the same fate as its predecessors.

The first picture of Venus's surface — showing flat ground strewn with sharp-edged stones — has baffled Soviet scientists.

One Soviet expert involved with Wednesday's landing said:

"This picture will make us completely rethink all our ideas about Venus."

The sharp-edged stones indicated that there is none of the erosion many scientists believed would have resulted from the 500-degree Celsius heat and dust storms thought to sweep the surface.

The landscape appeared flat, despite earlier speculation that the atmosphere — 60 times heavier than earth's — would produce a fishbowl effect making the horizon appear to curve upward.

The capsule's instruments also radioed back that windspeed on the surface is little more than a gentle breeze.

Oak Bay Finally Realizes Recreation "Dream Come True"

To many dedicated volunteers, Youth Sports Organizations and Past and Present Members of the Oak Bay Parks and Recreation Commission, the opening of the Recreation Centre at 1975 Bee Street on Saturday and Sunday, October 25th and 26th at 7:30 p.m. is indeed a major community dream come true.

The reality of this dream is not an overnight accomplishment . . . Since the formation of the Oak Bay Recreation Commission by the Municipal Council on February 27th, 1957, under the leadership of the late Hugh Reston, the Oak Bay Municipal Recreation program has moved forward rapidly due to the continued interest of the community and Commission Members under the excellent direction of Ernie Costain, who succeeded Mr. Reston as Chairman in 1960, and of Kyrle Symons from 1970 to January 1975.

The first year was a time for listening to and listing the recreation needs of the residents of Oak Bay and the formulating of plans to cover these needs for both outside and inside leisure programs.

Since the only available buildings suitable for Recreation activities were the Boy Scouts and Girl Guide Halls at Fireman's Park and the School Gymnasiums, the Recreation Commission obtained permission to operate programs in the schools from the School Board. As a result Badminton, Archery, Basketball, Table Tennis and many other youth and adult programs were scheduled into the Senior Secondary and Elementary Schools in Oak Bay. The Senior Citizens met in the Girl Guide Hall.

With part time leaders, mostly recruited from sports and cultural groups in Oak Bay the program grew to the point where the Oak Bay Council recognized the need for a Professional Recreation Director with a central office established in the Municipal Hall. Popularity of the recreation programs offered grew to such an extent the Council Chamber as well as every other available space was used. It was then Council approved the erection of Oak Bay's first Mini Community Centre at Windsor in 1969.

Still relying on Volunteers for help and with only one addition to the staff further plans went forward for the completion of Henderson Park and an ice arena and swimming pool were planned for the present site of the new complex, but to the great disappointment of the Council and Commission members, this met with defeat when presented to the residents in 1964.

However, undaunted, the Municipal Council and Recreation Commission Members turned their attention to the planning of a much needed Senior Citizens Centre and a field house at Henderson Park with space allowed for a gymnasium in the same area as there was evidence of a need for further large floor space for indoor activities.

In 1969 one more step in the realization of recreation dreams in Oak Bay was reached when both Federal and Provincial Government Grants and Loans became more readily available, and as a result Oak Bay's first major dream came true in the opening of the Library and Senior Citizens Centre in December 1970, where 1700 members take part in a full program of activities, 7 days per week. The Henderson Park Gymnasium was opened in June of 1971. This area is open 7 days per week, and used to capacity.

In 1972 the Committee, consisting of members of Council, Representatives from the Recreation Commission and Sports Organizations began seriously planning the present Recreation Complex as a 3-area facility which included an Ice Surface for skating, Swimming Pool and Curling Rink. A further step of creating a Parks and Recreation Department was considered and in 1974 this was approved.

In February, 1975, the Recreation Commission took over the extra responsibilities of becoming a Parks and Recreation Commission with Mr. Ken Hurn as Chairman.

Many long hours of planning and working with volunteers, service clubs, sports and cultural organizations have been an important part in the creating of recreation programs and facilities in Oak Bay.

To all those who have been involved through the years a very sincere vote of thanks is given as the time draws near for the opening of a further important Recreation dream in the Municipality of Oak Bay.

Action by TV 'Offensive'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge said Wednesday he thinks it offensive that a television station would make possibly defamatory statements about men in public life without verifing them first.

Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson made his comment during a damage suit of 11 Vancouver policemen who are suing B.C. Television Broadcasting Ltd. for libel.

The policemen sued after a BCTV show July 13, 1972, in which a known prostitute and drug addict alleged that members of the city's vice squad were accepting payoffs to safeguard prostitutes and drug figures from arrest.

What the station in effect did in its broadcast featuring the prostitute and her charges of police payoffs was to tell its audience "'we don't know whether this is true or false but here it is for your consideration' and did it without troubling to find out if the allegations were true or false," Mr. Justice Hinkson said.

He found this procedure offensive, he added.

He suggested that the woman's statements to a television reporter — made and filmed in advance of its actual showing "had to be regarded with some degree of caution."

Ed Ewachniuk, counsel for the 11 policemen, meanwhile, argued that it was not necessary for the men to be named in order for them to have been defamed.

It was only necessary for the plaintiffs to show that they were described in such a way that acquaintances would understand the references to mean them, he added.

Reasonable third parties having seen the broadcast would conclude that the plaintiffs were those officers, he said.

The prostitute later admitted that her charges of bribery were false. An internal investigation by the police department also showed the men to be innocent of any wrongdoing.

Wallace Seeks New MD School

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Scott Wallace, British Columbia Progressive Conservative leader, called Wednesday for the establishment of a second provincial medical school and financial incentives to attract doctors to northern communities.

But, Wallace said, he was opposed to "any policy which woulds single out immigrant doctors and treat them in a discriminatory way." The policy would be palatable, he said if it applied to all immigrants not just doctors.

He felt it is "wrong in principle to try to solve the problem of doctor shortages in the north by placing special restrictions on immigrant doctors," he said.

He would prefer to see the government use incentives draw doctors to the north.

The province's only medical school, located in Vancouver, provided space for about 80 medical students a year for a provincial population of about 2.2 million, he added.

'Origin' Fish Plan Proposed

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — State fisheries director Donald Moos has proposed a "river of origin" plan he says would allow an increase in the salmon catch for Canadian and American fishermen.

Moos' proposal calls for the Canadian government to "undertake fisheries enhancement work on the Fraser River, while the United States does the same in Puget Sound.

The result, he said, Tuesday would be an increase in available salmon for both countries while the strain on the Fraser River run is reduced.

The current Fraser River run of sockeye salmon is equally shared by both countries under a two-nation treaty.

Moos said Canadians might be willing to undertake such enhancement work if they knew there would be a reduction in American fishing in northern Puget Sound and the strait of Juan De Fuca.

However, Frank Haw, deputy director, emphasized that "we're not talking about cutting entirely back from Canadian fishing nor would we expect Canadians to lay off all our fish. But we would like to see a limit on the interception rate."

Airport Resisters Lose

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five families, who resisted federal government attempts to evict them to make way for expension of Vancouver International Airport, have lost the battle.

The Federal Court of Canada on Wednesday allowed the crown's appeal against an order that gave the families the right to remain in their homes on Sea Island, south of here.

Norman Mullins, lawyer for the federal government, said Wednesday that the Crown will apply immediately for warrants to evict the people. Originally six families were involved in the dispute but one has settled since the case was heard in November, 1974.

Mullins said the federal court judges, headed by Mr. Justice Wilbur Jackett, have sent the case back to a trial judge on the basis that the crown is entitled to possession warrants.

In the earlier decison, Mr. Justice R. D. Decary dismissed the crown's application on the grounds that the government, which expropriated the property in March, 1973, has not shown need to take physical possession.

More than 50 expropriations have been made.

"There is nothing left to argue about," Mullins said. "We are entitled to these warrants."

He said the appeal judges ruled that the Crown had fulfilled the conditions required to apply for possession warrants —proper notice had been given, valid expropriation had taken place and possession had been prevented—and it was not necessary to prove that the government needed the land to add another runway to the airport.

Mullins said four of the five persons left in the case have already acquired new homes and are refusing to vacate their properties in the hope of benefitting from newly inflated prices. The residents argue that the government expropriated in 1973, long before the land was actually required, as a hedge against inflation.

Separate actions on the evaluation of 35 properties in the subdivisons are still pending and the residents' lawyer has proposed that the government divide $2.5 million, over and above the money already paid at 1973 market values, among the expropriated owners.

Egg Man Wins Right to Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Marketing Board granted an appeal Wednesday against the B.C. Egg Marketing Board which had disallowed transfer of an egg production quota.

The appeal by Clarence Jansen was heard by the BCEMB after his application to take over a 340-case a week production unit valued at $100,000 owned by Westmount Farms Ltd. of Delta, was rejected.

Later Westmount applied and was granted permission to transfer its farm to Abbotsford and a subsequent application by Jansen to take over the quota was not heard by the board.

At a meeting the following day, the board changed its regulations, creating one that said when an egg farm is transferred by one owner to a new location, that farm cannot be sold for two years.

During the appeal, witnesses said board member Fred Krahn approached a part owner of Westmount after the egg board refusal and said he might be interested in buying the farm himself.

The appeal was heard more than two weeks ago but a decision was delayed because of a possibility the board did not have the power to grant the appeal.

GARDENING

Care Needed in Saving Seeds

Home gardeners tell me they always leave the last few bean and pea pods on the vines in order to get seed for the next year.

Pulling up the old vines over the weekend they found the pods covered with mould (probably mildew), and in some instances the pods had split and the seeds had mould on them.

The question they ask is how to destroy the mould without damaging the seed, but the real question is whether it is worth the trouble to try and save such seed.

Pea and bean pods produced on old plants at the end of the season will never be top-quality. It is the pods produced early in the season on vigorous young vines that have the best seeds.

If this stripping of vines when they are pulled up is a widespread practice it could account for the numerous complaints regarding poor germination and meagre crops.

Whether it be a seedsman or a home gardener, the principle behind saving seed is the same, that is to obtain seed from the best plants so as to maintain, and if possible improve, the strain.

Selection and roguing are the most important terms in the seedsman's vocabulary. Always select for the best plants with near ideal growth habit, many large flowers, good shaped pods well filled, and rogue out all that do not come up to standard.

This is possibly more than the home gardener need do since he cannot sell seed and therefore does not have to satisfy the requirements of the Seeds Act.

But if he desires to continue having good crops he must avoid the natural deterioration of the strain and not propagate from leftovers. It is like purchasing an expensive car and always driving it in low gear, he'll get nowhere very fast.

The home gardener wishing to save his own pea and bean seed must first of all decide the attributes of the strain that make is desirable for him to go to this trouble.

With these attributes constantly in mind, select the plants which appear to come near this standard of perfection from the day germination starts. Early germination and robust growth will be the main points at this stage.

Mark these plants with some identification, such as colored plastic strips attached to stakes, and continue evaluating them.

Check carefully when in flower, noting the earliest and those with most blooms at the start, and remove the markers from those which fail to qualify.

When the pods form, none are picked from the selected plants for use in the home; all are left on the plants to mature.

As most gardeners know, when the pods are not picked regularly the vines soon go out of flower and put their energy into maturing the seed, and that is exactly what the seed grower wants.

These selected, unpicked vines will mature their seed early, and start withering long before the regularly picked vines have ceased to produce, but the pods are left to dry in the summer sun.

Finally, the largest pods with the most seeds are selected for saving. Small pods with few seed are discarded otherwise the crop will gradually deteriorate to small pods with two or three seeds inside.

In the meantime, the family feed off the unselected plants, picking regularly to maintain production and using the poor quality leftovers at the end of the season, not saving them for seed.

Here stands a waterfront property of over one acre in size that really is a Shangri-La. A private and secluded winding black topped road takes you through lovely trees and garden to the waterfront and the large 2-bedroom main home. Yes, there is a completely self-contained guest cottage also. Space does not permit all the glowing reports I may give you. However, to mention a few — there is wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, picture windows overlooking entire seaward side, white shell beach, wall-to-ceiling fireplace of Roman brick, heatilator in living room, fireplace also in family room. Property on city water, permanent sea wall, large sundeck and patio over boathouse with boat winch, hot-water heating, and believe me I could go on and on. Full price $135,000. MLS. Fishery Patrols Chopped

VANCOUVER (CP) The Fisheries Department decision to call in its patrol fleet is "a false economy" which will hurt fishermen and the public, fishermen's union president Homer Stevens said Wednesday.

Stevens was commenting on fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc's confirmation that the department is considering cutting back patrols of the 12-mile limit off the B.C. coast.

Leblanc made the statement in the Commons in reply to Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon who said he had received "alarming" reports that 29 of 30 fishing patrol boats are immobilized for lack of funds at a time when 20 foreign trawlers are in the vicinity of the 12-mile limit.

Rod Hourston, west coast director of fisheries, said in an interview that only the 180-foot patrol vessel Tanu is operational and she is now in port.

At last report there were 19 foreign vessels operating off the B.C. coast, 11 of them Polish trawlers and the rest Japanese, Russian and East German.

"We've run into high operating costs — higher fuel costs and more overtime. We haven't been receiving compensatory increases from Ottawa to match the costs," said Hourston.

The increased overtime costs resulted because "we had a large number of foreign vessels off the coast this summer," he said.

"We've pulled the patrol fleet in and are reviewing what to do until the end of the year. The budget has gone faster than usual."

Hourston said salmon fishing was almost over and the next big fishing would be for herring in March.

The foreign trawlers are concentrating on hake, he said, but "you can't relax while they're out there."

Aerial patrols of the Canadian Forces co-operate in spotting foreign vessels but Hourston said a boat could get back outside the 12-mile limit before an intercept vessel could reach the area.

Attempting to patrol the whole coast with one boat could leave it wide open for foreign boats to fish inside the Canadian limit, Stevens said.

BBB Draws Angry Blast

The radical Canadian Liberation Movement is protesting recent allegations by Victoria Better Business Bureau that a fund-raising effort in the Gorge by the CLM involved "sophisticated con men."

Bill Tindall of the BBB had told the Times last Friday that canvassers claiming to represent an unnamed union and soliciting funds to keep U.S. professors from coming to Canada to take up positions at Canadian universities was undermining the United Way Appeal in the Gorge.

"Your irresponsible statements, with lack of concrete investigation, about the integrity of the fund-raising, were most unbecoming," CLM spokesman Nancy MacIntosh said in a letter to the BBB, adding that the Canadian Liberation movement is a nationwide socialist movement committed to building an independent, socialist Canada.

Tindal maintains that his statements were not irresponsible in the light of the BBB's investigations.

"Our information indicated that canvassers were soliciting funds in the Gorge Road area without identifying themselves or providing substantiation for their public appeal program," he said.

"During the course of our investigation, there was never at any time any reference to the Canadian Liberation Movement . . .

"There is in fact a possibility there was yet a third party canvassing in the area."

Tindall said he is not questioning the movement's validity, but through the BBB's investigations he found sufficient evidence to indicate that there was an obvious conflict in the timing of the movement's solicitation with the United Way Appeal.

But Nancy MacIntosh said: "The fact that the United Appeal drive coincides with ours may be unfortunate but the scope and purposes of the two drives is clearly different to those people canvassed and poses no 'undermining' of either drive. The United Appeal is obviously a charitable organization and the CLM is obviously a political one, with clearly explained goals."

The main goal is to "unite all patriotic Canadians to fight U.S. imperialist control."

The Toronto-based Canadian Liberation movement's most recent activity in Victoria was on Sept. 2 where it put up signs on the Causeway reading "Yankee Go Home". The signs were removed by the city engineering department because city engineer said they were of "questionable taste." The CLM has also been printing Yankee Go Home T-shirts and bumper stickers.

HORNBY 'ENJOYS' COMMANDO RAID

The friendly invasion is being carried out under the code name of Ocean Swell and is designed to culminate eight weeks of intensive training for 21 members of No. 2 Airborne Commando, Canadian Airborne Regiment of Edmonton.

The men, by the time they graduate will be skilled in airborne, airmobile and amphibious tactics.

Also taking part in the mock invasion are 37 men from the 3rd Batallion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, based at Work Point, and a backup staff of instructors and others from the Edmonton headquarters of the Edmonton Mobile Command.

A platoon from the 1st-75th U.S. Infantry Division Rangers at Fort Stewart in Georgia are also involved.

The troops parachuted from Edmonton-based Hercules aircraft on Sunday, landing in an area south of Duncan. The advance party was landed on Hornby Island Monday morning, being taken there aboard the Esquimalt-based destroyers HMCS Terra Nova, HMCS Saskatchewan and HMCS Qu'Appelle.

The three destroyers returned to Hornby at first light today in order that the main party of troops could make a dawn landing.

Escaper's Danger Disputed

Police and corrections officials were at odds today in describing what kind of threat an 18-year-old escaper from the Jordan River corrections camp may pose.

Sooke RCMP say Joseph Dean Mayday should be considered dangerous. They warned he may be armed and should be approached with caution.

McGillivray said there was nothing in Mayday's background to indicate he was given to violence.

He said the man, who was serving six months definite and 12 months indeterminate for a variety of false pretence and fraud charges, had been making good progress at the forestry camp and had received favorable reports from staff.

He felt Mayday's disappearance sometime between 5:30 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. Wednesday was "probably a spur of the moment act."

Mayday has been sent to the minimum security camp, seven miles west of Jordan River, on Sept. 20 and was due for release in early January.

Corrections officers and police searched the vicinity of the camp for six hours Wednesday without success.

McGillivray said he believed Mayday may have tried to hide among the squatters who live on the beaches between Sooke and Port Renfrew.

Mayday, a native of Calgary, is described as about six feet tall, 155 pounds, light brown hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion. He was wearing khaki institutional clothing when last seen.

China-Aided Railroad Completed

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — China's most ambitious overseas project — the $500 million, 1,200-mile Tanzam railrod linking landlocked Zambia with the Indian Ocean — will be officially opened today nearly a year ahead of schedule.

The project, denounced by the Soviets and some Western nations as an effort by Peking to subvert East Africia, took 60,000 workers and engineers five years to build, laying four miles of track a day.

The track, nicknamed the Uhuru (Freedom) Railroad, was built to help move the bulk of Zambia's huge copper exports to the Indian Ocean and eventually open up for exploitation southern Tanzania's proven but untapped iron and coal deposits.

It has been China's most costly overseas project, reflecting the importance Peking attached to the area. China said it enlisted the workers, but Russia and some Western politicians and businessmen insist that the 20,000 Chinese in the force were Chinese People's Liberation Army troops.

Bands Play For Camosun

A two-day Oktoberfest celebration, complete with oom-pah-pah band, will be held Friday and Saturday to raise money for Camosun College Marketing Society educational projects and bursaries.

The traditional Bavarian band, Edelweiss, and rock bands Jet and Triad will provide continuous music from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Stardust Cabaret, 1037 View.

Also scheduled is a raffle draw for trip for two to Munich.

VD Warning For Birth Pills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has ordered birth control pill makers to put venereal disease warnings on labels next year.

While there is no evidence the pills have contributed to the rise in VD infections, the agency said: "Some persons are uninformed on this subject and may be misled into believing that oral contraceptives prevent venereal disease."

Effective next Jan. 19, patient labelling and brochures will carry the following warning: "Caution: Oral contraceptives are of no value in the prevention or treatemnt of venereal disease."

'Ugly' Douglas St. Draws Blast

Egon Baumann looked out his office window and saw rats playing in the grass on Audley Street — just another sign that north Douglas Street needs cleaning up.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president told chamber directors Wednesday the Saanich part of Douglas is "badly neglected in beautification."

His business is on Douglas near the corner of Audley and he reports his staff often sees the rats. The street is "rat-infested — I saw them there this week, right next to a food restaurant," Baumann said.

He urged the chamber to send a strong letter to the municipality or Mayor Ed Lum asking that "ugly sites be looked after and brought into shape."

Baumann also was critical of the broken pavement, untrimmed trees that impede pedestrians and planters that have had no planting for some time and are often wrecked by auto crashes.

"Douglas Street is in such poor shape it's incredible," he said.

OREGON JAZZ GROUP PERFORMING SUNDAY

The jazz ensemble, Oregon, returns to Victoria on Sunday and will perform at Harpo's Cabaret, 15 Bastion Square.

Their visit in August was a major success for the sponsoring Victoria Jazz Society. Performance starts at 8 p.m., doors open at 6 p.m. and the cover charge includes dinner.

Oregon consists of classical and 12-string guitar player, Ralph Towner; Paul McCandless, oboe and French horn; Glen Moore, a bassist who also plays paino and flute, and Collin Walcott who brings the Eastern flavor of tabla and sitar to the ensemble together with percussion.

Towner, McCandless and Walcott were university music majors and have performed with major American symphony orchestras and chamber groups.

Moore, a history major at the University of Oregon, has studied bass extensively.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Although bridge bidding has become quite scientific during the past decade, owing to the introduction and development of the various artificial "one club" systems, guesswork and wishful thinking still play a predominant role in the bidding of many deals. Such was the case in the deal that follows. It was played in a team-of-four match at the 1975 Summer National Championships.

East West vulnerable. North deals.

WEST ♠ Q32 ♥ 107542 ♦ J94 ♣ 96		EAST ♠ AK5 ♥ AQ98 ♦ — ♣ KJ8752
	SOUTH ♠ 109874 ♥ KJ3 ♦ 1087 ♣ 43

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Dbl.	Pass	1 ♥
3 ♦	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♥.

Sitting South was Ron Smith, of St. Louis. When his partner jumped to three diamonds over West's one-heart bid, South assumed that his partner had a solid six- or seven-card suit. And, of course, North figured to have high-card strength outside of the diamond suit, since South, in theory, might have had zero points.

So South, although he had but four high-cards points, knew that he had the adversely bid heart suit protected. Trusting that West would lead a heart at trick one, and hoping that the defenders would not be able to cash the first five tricks, South took a gamble and trotted out a three no-trump bid.

West's opening heart lead was won by East's ace, after which East laid down the spade King. When West played the three-spot on this lead, East made the interpretation that the three was a discouraging card. So he reverted back to the heart suit, leading a low one. South put up the king and scampered home with nine tricks: one heart, seven diamonds and one club.

Had East continued with the spade ace at trick three, West would have played the deuce, completing his high-low signal denoting a positive interest in spades. East would then have led (we assume) his remaining spade, the trick being won by West's queen as dummy discarded the club ten.

West would have surely shifted to a club, and East couldn't be prevented from winning a trick with the club king, thus defeating South's contract. South, of course, could never enter his own hand to cash either his two high spades or the king of hearts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Study Aquarius message. You may be asked to display unique ability — and you'll be quizzed on costs, budget, projected credits, debits. Be analytical. Find reasons for happenings. Don't be satisfied with superficial questions or answers.

Apathy of B.C. Residents Blasted At Pearse Hearing

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

British Columbians don't seem to appreciate they are the biggest landowners of the province, an expert on reforestation told the Pearse Commission on Forest Resources Wednesday.

Bruce Devitt, manager of Pacific Logging, forestry division, said B.C. residents own 95 per cent of the land in the province but the commission was getting little input from them.

"Look at the attendance here," he said. "Where are the people?"

He said the commission was only receiving input from forest users, groups representing the interest of industry, recreation, fish and wildlife.

A farmer worth his salt will maintain the productivity of his land as he sees it is properly managed, he said.

But in B.C., the landowners (people) were apparently not prepared to recognize the need to take an interest in their land or were not living up to their responsibilities, he said.

Thus the commission had no way of knowing what the silent majority wanted.

But Devitt said people were not entirely to blame for the state of affairs.

The forest management structure did not provide for public involvement and input, he said

And within the structure, there were also people who resisted change and wanted to maintain the status quo.

He urged commission chairman Peter Pearse to recommend to the government to provide a structure for public involvement for developing resources and land use objectives based upon an understanding of land capabilities and needs of people.

Devitt held that a well-informed public was essential to develop objectives for use of forest lands.

It was essential, he added, that people understood the problems of forest management "if we are really interested in maintaining a resource and the land base from which it came, and at the same time preserve the integrity of the landscape."

"We must not siphon off all the dollars that the base can generate," he added.

He said community opinion and concensus should be sought and steps be taken to educate and inform and to involve people in planning.

Pearse asked Devitt if he thought regional boards were best suited for undertaking educational and involvement programs.

Devitt said this was one method, but there were many other ways of getting people involved, such as town meetings, community TV channels and public opinion polls.

He also said that various methods had been developed for assessing public opinion.

"Would you consider the establishment of municipal forests another way of getting people involved?" Pearse asked.

"Yes, I think this is an excellent way," he replied.

The forester also said steps should be taken to develop a philosophy of "not man against nature but man with nature."

PLANTING TOO SLOW

The reforestation program is not keeping pace with logging, Brian Zak, a forester from Maple Ridge, said at a hearing of the Royal Commission on Forest Resources Wednesday.

He said the B.C. Forest Service set a goal of having 75 million seedlings available for planting in 1975.

But based on the BCFS annual report figures, about 700,000 acres are being logged yearly and if 50 per cent require planting, then approximately 150 million seedlings are required annually, he said.

Zak said there was more than planting seedlings in a reforestation program.

Follow-up work was essential to ensure stocking throughout the rotation period if the province was to have sustained yield, he said.

This involved secondary plantings, plantation cleanings, juvenile spacing, thinnings and possibly fertilization, he said.

"The forest service is only doing a token amount of follow-up work," he said.

But the BCFS was not to blame, he added.

"Just how much can these professionals accomplish when they are understaffed and less than three percent of the provincial budget is being expended for forestry management," he said.

Saw Log Veto Sought

The government should ban the use of saw logs as a source of pulp wood by pulp mills, Frank G. Rainsford, a Victoria forester, said at a hearing of the Royal Commission on Forest Resources Wednesday.

Industry should use instead unused slash and thinnings — a perfectly good fibre for pulp, he said.

"But until the industry or government create and force the use of this fibre as a source of pulp wood and fibre board materials, it will continue to rot, burn or stagnate young forests," he said.

Portable barkers and chippers have proven successful in certain areas of the province in utilizing slash and thinnings, now considered as waste, he said.

He observed this fall 200 acres of timber was burned at Sooke because of mistletoe infestation.

He estimated that 35 per cent of the fibre in this wood could have been used as pulp wood.

Rainsford is president of the B.C. Cleanwood Preservers, a firm specializing in treating all types of wood for prevention of rot, decay and fire, and was a timberland appraiser for a number of years.

He also urged the commission to simplify forest taxation.

He said wild land, timberland, forest land tax assessments are based on average market value of such properties. Tree farm land assessment is mainly based on the productivity of the property.

"However, the appraisal system is cumbersome and not necessarily anywhere accurate — not because of the appraiser — but because of the forest and land conditions beyond his control," he said.

Stupich Plans 8 Meetings

A spokesman for Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Wednesday the minister will hold eight meetings across the province during a three-week tour in late November and early December.

He said Stupich will try to "provide a forum of discussion between farmers, government and agri-business on provincial, regional and agricultural programs implemented by the department."

PHARMACARE CARDS GOOD FOR BUSES

Senior citizens will soon be able to use their Pharmacare cards as passes on B.C. Hydro buses in Victoria and Vancouver.

Starting Nov. 1 residents over the age of 65 can use their Pharmacare card to get student fares on buses instead of using the old Hydro courtesy card.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said the changeover will simplify administration and consolidate the number of cards used by senior citizens to receive various provincial benefits.

The old courtesy cards will stay in effect until Dec. 31, 1975.

Leak Probe Plugged

OTTAWA (CP) — A request for a special committee to investigate the recent leak of a confidential draft report on immigration, was rejected by Commons Speaker James Jerome Wednesday.

The request was made Tuesday by Martin O'Connell, co-chairman of a special Commons-Senate committee on immigration.

His request followed publication of recommendations contained in the 101-page draft report, which was marked confidential and intended for use as the basis for forthcoming legislation.

O'Connell had almost unamious support for his motion from MPs of the other patties.

Jerome rejected the motion because it was "insufficiently specific."

"I refer to the absence from the motion of any allegation of misconduct which is specifically complained of in terms of a breach of the privilege of the House."

The motion made no mention of a breach of privilege through "an action by the publisher of the newspaper involved, or by the radio or television station, he said.

And the motion made no specific mention of such a breach by a member or the Commons, the Senate or their staffs."

He also felt the motion would have presented difficulties in that it would be establishing a committee to investigate "the work or operations of another committee, and that is a situation that has been carefully avoided in the past, and for good reason."

UNICEF Appeal Oct. 31

Halloween, Oct. 31, has been named UNICEF Day in B.C. and children will carry orange and black boxes door-to-door that evening to canvass for contributions.

The program began 20 years ago when $15,000 was collected. Last year, $988,521 was collected by Canadian children.

UNICEF spokesman Nancy Heron said even a small donation of 27 cents could buy a clinical thermometer. A $1 donation can deliver enough high-protein food to feed three children and a $5 gift can stock a village pond with young fish for potential protein supply."

Heron said that in many developing countries, 25 to 30 per cent of the children die before their fifth birthday and in some areas the mortality rate is as high as 50 to 70 per cent. Lack of proper food is the single biggest cause, she said.

UNICEF is helping countries provide food supplements, vaccines, antibiotics and other needed medicines to lessen this tragic toll.

"Canada has its own pockets of poverty but most of the 500 million potential victims are in the drought-stricken underdeveloped regions of Africa, Asia and South America . . . it's something to remember when children bring their UNICEF boxes to your home this Halloween," Heron said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Magazines such as Time and Reader's Digest must contain at least 80 per cent "Canadian" content if advertisers are to retain special tax status, Revenue Minister Bud Cullen announced today.

The decision, which also affects a number of smaller publications printed in Canada by foreign companies, was announced in a news release.

"Any issue of a periodical is disqualified as 'Canadian' if its contents, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of one or more issues of foreign periodicals," the release said.

"The government's policy requires that more than 80 per cent of the contents of a Canadian periodical must be material which has not appeared in any current or prior issues of foreign publications with which the Canadian periodical may have any type of continuing arrangement for access to material."

All-Out Attack Planned

Times News Services

Solid groundwork for an all-out attack on the federal government's new anti-inflation program was laid on two fronts Wednesday.

In Vancouver, leaders of 125,000 provincial and federal civil servants in British Columbia decided to fight the controls "because of inequities in it."

Following a meeting 14 public service unions and professional associations, Jack Gerow, seecretary-business manager of the Hospital Employees' Union, Local 180, said the group will seek a meeting with Premier Barrett to urge him not to join the program.

The 14 unions and associations are to set up a committee under the chairmanship of Bill Bradley, president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, to co-ordinate the campaign.

Among the other groups represented at the meeting were: Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union; B.C. Government Employees' Association; Vancouver Police Union; Public Service Alliance of Canada; College of Dental Surgeons; Registered Nurses; Health Sciences Association; Professional Institute of Public Service and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses' Association.

About 1,000 delegates to the Canadian Union of Public Employees national convention in Toronto were told by their new leader Grace Hartman that they should be prepared to take part, if necessary, in "our own demonstrations, lobbies and other forms of political action."

She urged delegates of the 210,000-member union to defy selective wage controls which limit about 4.3 million workers to a basic wage increase of 10 per cent.

"Through its wage freeze program, the Trudeau government has tried to severly restrict what we can negotiate at the baragaining table," said Hartman.

"If the Canadian Labor Congress is not prepared to take decisive militant action against the wage freeze, we will fight it on our own."

Shirley Carr of the Canadian Labor Congress said top executives of her organization also are opposed to the anti-inflation program because "it will effect a greater hardship on the workers than ever before."

The labor congress, which represents 1.8 million workers through its affiliated unions, has scheduled an emergency meeting of its executive council Friday to discuss the controls.

Carr said that federal government representatives are "going across the country and getting into every union meeting that they can get into."

"But solidarity is our message," she said. "We will stick together and we will not divided."

Times News Services

Finance Minister Dave Stupich said today he will recommend the B.C. cabinet fully co-operate with the federal anti-inflation program.

In a telephone interview with the Times from Ottawa, Stupich said he felt the federal-provincial conference had gone well and that although there are still problems, the federal government has made some moves in most areas of concern to B.C.

"There seems to be general agreement the federal government does want this to work," said Stupich.

Other provincial representatives expressed similar concerns about the program as those voiced by B.C. he said.

B.C. wants a tightening up of controls on prices and profits and restraints on interest rates as well as federal government low interest mortgage for housing.

Stupich said he expects he will be able to say to cabinet: "Okay, it's not as good as we think it should be but the whole picture is clear enough and we should co-operate."

Premier Barrett has said he will make a public statement on B.C.'s final position Friday afternoon.

The two-day conference ended today with energy minister Donald Macdonald announcing "provincial authorization" to proceed with the program.

He said there may be a further meeting of finance ministers in a few weeks to iron out details. In the meantime a committee of officials will discuss the thorny issue of controls on incomes of professionals, such as doctors and lawyers.

Saskatchewan delegate Walter Smishek, health minister, told reporters: "I am leaving with a feeling of deeper frustration than when I came." There were too many unanswered questions and Ottawa was "buck-passing" on many issues.

The labor ministers were to meet later today on the implications of the anti-inflation program.

Wednesday in Ottawa, Macdonald said the government may amend its anti-inflation guidelines to allow wage increases of more than $600 for people at the low end of the income scale.

Macdonald said there were several other areas where the government might consider amendments.

However, he declined to specify them.

The minister said he would consider the provincial repre-

Problem Translates To $500M

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department is faced with what a spokesman calls a monumental problem of translating about one million pages of technical documents into French.

The spokesman said Wednesday the cost would be about $50 million over an indefinite period of years.

He said the problem is not properly defined yet — "we just know that it's there." There was no indication when the work would start.

The spokesman was commenting on a rumor that the task would cost as much as $500 million. He said that figure appears too high.

The translation is part of a progam started in 1972 to make defence documentation and printing bilingual.

The program is in line with the forces 'announced determination to reflect the French-English split in Canada. That means that eventually the forces will be 28 per cent Francophone at all levels.

The spokesman said in 1973 about 55 armed forces publications — drill manuals, dress manuals and the like — were bilingual. Today 415 have been translated and 300 are being translated — most to French from English.

About 65 per cent of the armed forces administrative orders, a massive set of papers running into several volumes, are in both languages and all new directives are coming out in both languages.

But translators now face two million pages of technical papers — everything from plans for planes to manufacturer's manuals on guns.

Lucky Phone Call Saves Anti-IRA MP

Times News Services

LONDON — One of Britain's leading cancer specialists was killed today when a bomb blew up under a car outside the house where Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late president John Kennedy, was staying.

Her host, Conservative MP Hugh Fraser who owned the car, said neither she nor he was injured.

Police said the 8:53 a.m. blast killed Prof. Gordon Hamilton Fairley as he was taking his poodle for a morning walk.

Seven other persons, including a Filipino woman who worked as a cook and housemaid for Fraser, suffered minor injuries.

Fraser and Miss Kennedy, 17, had been planning to leave the house at about the time of the blast but a telephone call from a fellow MP kept them inside, Fraser said.

"Normally I would have been in the car when this happened but I was on the telephone," said Fraser, who in his public speeches has taken a tough stance against terrorism.

Fraser, a hard-line IRA opponent, has received many death threats recently, his secretary said.

"There is no doubt it was meant for me. Somebody obviously wants to blow me up," he said.

Fraser, 57, said the bomb would only harden his determination to crack down on terrorism.

Looking pale and distraught, Miss Kennedy stared straight ahead and said nothing as police guided her into a waiting auto.

The bombing was London's sixth in two months. The last, 10 days ago, killed a man near the Ritz Hotel.

Unofficial speculation linked the blast with life sentences given less than 24 hours erlier to three Irishmen and a London girl for planting a pub bomb that killed 12 persons earlier this year.

On Aug. 29, an explosives expert was killed in a blast on nearby Kensington High Street — one of a half-dozen bombings in London during the past two months.

Thirteen days ago, a bomb killed a bystander and injured 20 persons at a bus stop shelter on Piccadilly, the heart of London's night life.

CELSIUS CHILL BLAMED FOR TOURISM DIP

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The federal government's metric conversion program has been cited as one of the reasons why British Columbia motel, resort and trailer park owners suffered an 11 per cent loss of business so far this year.

Mike Kowaluk, president of the B.C. Motel, Resort and Trailer Parks Association, which is holding its annual convention here, said many Americans haven't learned to relate to Celsius temperatures.

Kowaluk said when they hear a city is having 26-degree weather they think it is "darn cold."

He also blamed high food prices in B.C. for discouraging American tourists.

Socialists Mass For Lisbon Rally

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The Socialist Party today accused Portugal's Communists of intentionally instigating a climate on anarchy at all levels of society.

The socialist attack came as thousands of left-wing soldiers and civilians filtered into Lisbon for a Communist-backed mass rally tonight against the Socialist-dominated government of Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro De Azevedo.

"The situation is grave, since the Communist Party participates in the sixth (provisional) government and continues to pretend support for the armed forces movement," the socialists said in a communique.

"The political agitation which the Communist Party intentially foments is introducing anarchy at all levels of Portuguese society in a disastrous way."

Woman Terrorist Won't Go

But the 19-year-old girl with him, Marian Coyle, refused to let him and Herrema go.

"It looks like she's the tough one and she wants to see this thing through to the end," said one policeman.

Police said they will wait the terrorists out.

The siege continued in its third day, with Gallagher, the girl and their hostage barricaded behind mattresses in an upstairs room and police and armed soldiers occupying the ground floor.

Gallagher's offer, made to Chief Supt. Lawrence Wren of Dublin's crime squad, was the first crack in his defiance.

Wren told him he would make no deals, and Gallagher would have to bring Herrema down with him.

But Miss Coyle refused to let them go, the police said.

Mystery Dose of Chlorine Blamed for Big Fish Kill

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A massive dose of chlorine of uncertain origin was responsible for Sunday's sudden kill of more than 1.3 million salmon at the Capilano Hatchery, Environment Canada officials said Wednesday.

They said that either someone put the chemical into the hatchery water supply as an act of vandalism or sabotage, or the chlorine accidentally got into the hatchery water from the nearby chlorination plant of the Greater Vancouver Water District.

RCMP are investigating but so far have no concrete evidence of vandalism.

Frank Bunnell, chief commissioner of the water board, later said interviews with employees of the chlorine plant have shown that no one knows of any accidental turning of valves that could have fed chlorinated — instead of untreated — water to the hatchery.

Hans Krause, of the Greater Vancouver Water District, had said Sunday there was no possibility that the salmon had been poisoned by chlorine.

The hatchery gets most of its water from Capilano Lake, which also serves as a water supply for the city, but Krause said the hatchery water is piped off before the water is chlorinated for city use.

But he said that anyone who knew the water supply system for the hatchery would have no trouble introducing a poison into the water.

11 KILLED IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT (UPI) — Rival Lebanese militias traded rocket, mortar and machine gun fire across a deserted and frightened Beirut today.

Heavy fighting between rival Christian and Moslem militias raged through central and eastern Beirut, killing 11 persons and wounding 13.

A rocket-propelled grenade slammed into the fourth floor wing of the uptown Holiday Inn Wednesday night, causing some damage but no casualties.

Lebanese officials, meanwhile, tried to contact the kidnappers of two Americans, Charles Gallagher, 44, of Roanoke, Va., and William Dykes 65, of San Jose, Calif.

Study Knocks Record System At Sundance

Sundance school, Greater Victoria's less-structured alternative school experiment, has been criticized for failing to keep traditional records on student achievement.

A special evaluation team report prepared for the Greater Victoria school board says there is a "noticeable lack of significant data" on student progress.

The team, which also evaluated the board's more structured alternative school, Sentinel, was headed by board assistant superintendent of instruction Glenn Wall.

It says that the objectives of both schools have "for the most part been met" and Sundance appeared highly successful.

Started in September, 1973, when 50 parents camped on the school grounds overnight to register their children, Sundance was difficult to evaluate, the team said.

Because of the school's philosophy—to develop a positive and realistic self-concept in children — reporting student progress is not viewed as being too important by parents.

"It does, however, make it most difficult to evaluate the achievement of students, particularly in mathematics and language when no systematic records are maintained," says the report.

Students at the Quadra street school—enrolment is 116 this year with a waiting list of 55—range from kindergarten age to Grade 7 and are divided into five family groupings, removing grade divisions.

The team suggests the school maintain specific records of student progress, especially in the basic skills.

"Similarly there does not appear to be sufficient marking of students' work to ensure that a reinforcement of errors is not allowed to continue," the report says.

"Because of a desire on the part of staff to create positive non-threatening learning situations, at no time are students compelled to get down to work.

The team feels that a child has to be highly motivated in order to succeed academically at Sundance where "such a permissive environment causes some students to be unable to cope with this freedom and are probably wasting time."

A survey of parents, however, indicates they are extemely pleased with the school.

And the team recommends that because Sundance is an experimental alternative school, it should receive more than the basic supply grants than other schools, especially since it emphasizes individualized instruction.

In the case of Sentinel, the school regulations — "You are not permitted to chew gum at school or in transit to or from school" — indicate the traditional approach to learning.

Sentinel, 3861 Cedar Hill, offers Grade 3 to Grade 7 instruction to 120 students. There is a waiting list of 60.

"It is the team's opinion that the satisfaction with Sentinel is because of its structure approach, its emphasis on classroom discipline, courtesy and respect and its stress on the fundamental basic skills in reading, writing and computation."

The team says that the study program is no different from that of other schools, but the consistency with which students are disciplined, "the expectations made of them as far as getting down to work is concerned and the stress on teacher directed learning" does provide an alternative.

Parents, the report says, are prepared to send their children great distances to the school and that indicates a steady demand.

"They will be most unhappy if for any reason it is decided to discontinue it."

The school no longer has a large student population which could be described as academically inclined but has attracted students in need of learning assistance and or a disciplinary approach.

Instead of a careful screening approach initially adopted, students are referred to Sentinel by neighborhood school principals and vacancies are also filled by names appearing top on the waiting list.

The report is being studied by school board trustees.

Statuesque, but Frail

The statue of the Goddess of Mezcal Mayahuel was officially presented to the city of Victoria at noon today in the foyer of city hall.

Life size and demure, she is a gift from Senor Francisco Javier Sauza Mexican industrialist, tequila tycoon and rancher, as a token of friendship between Mexico and Canada.

Sauza and some associates were on hand for the ceremony today, with the goddess resting temporarily on a wood base. She's made of a soft material, described by one official as a "sort of pumice-stone compound."

Originally intended for display outdoors, at a location yet to be chosen, it may be she will have to dwell indoors. Mayor Peter Pollen was expected to consult with the donor and local experts before settling that question.

There's another possibility. Winter clothes it may be practical to toughen her with hardener and sealer for outdoor display.

Two Tries on Hall, Arson Trial Told

Two Victoria men filled plastic jugs with gasoline at a self-serve gas station and made two attempts to set fire to the Jehovah's Witnesses Kingdom Hall before succeeding last October, county court was told Wednesday.

Crown witness Raymond Kapfer said he accompanied John Robert Atkinson and Terry Darrow Emerson, both 21, to the hall on Joan Crescent Oct. 13.

Emerson and Atkinson are standing trial on a charge of arson before Judge Peter Millward and a jury of six men and six women.

Kapfer, 18, of 1099 Princess, said he first met Atkinson about a year ago, when Atkinson moved in next door.

Kapfer said his own family is of the Jehovah Witness faith and he used to be.

Atkinson and Emerson picked him up in a car Oct. 13 in the evening and said they intended to burn down the hall, Kapfer testified.

"I don't know who it was said by," Kapfer added.

"I said they were crazy and they'd get caught sooner or later," Kapfer told court.

He said he sat in the car while Atkinson and Emerson gathered six or eight plastic jugs from the disposal unit behind Smitty's Pancake House on Douglas about 8:30 p.m.

"I just sat there wondering whether they were bluffing or for real."

The gasoline, he said, was obtained at a station on Hillside and Atkinson got rags from his Burnside home. Kapfer said he took no part in the preparations and made one attempt to leave the pair, but was stopped.

"I wanted to take off and go home because I wanted no part of it.

"But Emerson and Atkinson came to stop me . . . and I didn't want to start a hassle so I got back in the car."

The car, a gold Comet, stopped 200 yards from the hall, and Kapfer testified he could partially see the hall.

"The two travelled fast (on foot) toward the Kingdom Hall, and I sat in the car and said to myself — 'they're going to do it.'" Kapfer said under questioning by Prosecutor David Lisson.

Atkinson and Emerson, he said, were carrying the jugs filled with gas and rags. They returned to the car a short time later and "Atkinson said it didn't work but he'd try it again."

After driving around the block the car returned to the same place, Kapfer said, and both got out, ran down to the hall. One of them had a cigar lit."

When the pair returned this time, Atkinson said "we did it —but I think we were seen; there was a lady or a man walking a dog."

Kapfer said when they drove by the hall "the whole place was in flames."

"We went to Emerson's house and we picked up Emerson's black car" and later the three of them went to Coffee Mac's and had something to eat.

After the trio had eaten, they picked up a friend named Frank.

"And one of them (Emerson and Atkinson) told Frank — 'we got jugs, and rags and put them in a mail box and Kingdom Hall,'" Kapfer testified.

They parked the car at Craigdarroch Castle near Kingdom Hall, and Frank asked to go down to the hall and see the damage done, Kapfer said.

The trio hid behind brush were "we could vaguely see the fire, fire trucks, smoke and police officers," said Kapfer.

The Failure of Women Where It Most Counts

Our middle daughter, Jill, who is a militant advocate of the women's liberation philosophy and whose occasional weekends back in the nest create a debating society that gives me perverse pleasure, is very cross at me now about that column on married women in hotels.

I thought, myself, it was a pleasant enough essay, being devoted to the obvious response of escape and even delight that a woman may exhibit when she has a reprieve from household duties as we enjoyed up at Qualicum last month during a short vacation.

But no, said Jill. It was condescending and patronizing, the typical prattling of a male chauvinist, she said. "You sounded," said she, "as if you'd let the dog out of the kennel for a nice walk and wasn't it just grand of you. Ooo, there are times when you make me so mad!"

I am not mentioning this now to show you that there's nothing like a visiting daughter to penetrate Daddy's little puncture-prone psyche, which you already know if you've a daughter of two, but simply to illustrate once more why I am so often befuddled about what it is that women really want in the name of liberation.

You can't put this down to a mere generation gap. That particular column had barely appeared before a woman reader, fully my own age, was on the telephone asking me who the devil I thought I was conferring, as she put it, a temporary freedom on my wife.

It seems to me to ignore the whole fabric of marriage and its joint partnership and I think it explains, too, why the so-called liberation movement has never really had the support of women. Even to suggest that there is a male-domination in the relationship of wedlock is laughable.

I look about this office now, looking at some of my male friends whose homes I have been in, and I visualize a sort of composite husband. I'm damned if I can see anything wrong with him.

He turns over almost everything he earns to his wife. He shares with his wife those tiny triumphs or setbacks in his own work and he shares, too, in her own difficulties or victories. He is, though he may not admit it, very conscious of the dangers of tedium or fatigue in what she does. Far from resentment or suppression, if he has a wife who holds down her own job or has outside interests, he is proud of that involvement. What's more he believes in the ancient tenets of a genuine liberation, the woman's right to a full equality in society. Sure, he may be a difficult or downright miserable person. But he is very seldom a chauvinist.

That's where I think so many women's liberationists, so very often spinsters of one kind or another, have gone wrong. They either don't know or don't care that the vast majority of women are quite content with the lives they lead or, if they're not, they know the alternatives.

Apart from this, what puts me off about this "movement" is that women have done little or nothing in the one area where, it can be said, males demonstrably exploit females.

If we accept the fact that women are the principal consumers of household goods in our society then it is little short of scandalous that they go along with every sort of cynical gimmick and merchandising trick that can be devised.

Those women I know who carry on the good fight within the consumers' groups tell me it's impossible to interest or promote a membership with the vast majority of women shoppers. The consumer guide magazines, probably the most worthwhile magazines on the market today, have about one-fiftieth of the circulation of any crummy magazine that contains a feature on Jackie Kennedy.

The women liberationists like to say that they are working for an age of enlightenment, in short, but where women might have the most profound influence on the economy of the home and the nation they are rarely heard.

We're told that the hard facts of inflation have cut down somewhat on impulse buying, that supreme idiocy of the woman shopper, but in every other area there is still the wishful philosophy of getting something for nothing and a willingness to put quality or price on a level below the most flagrant rip-offs of the market.

Inflation or not, women are mad for prizes and, indeed, it is a way of life in the supermarket. Newspapers, radio and television are crammed with give-away offers. Win a free trip to Hawaii, to Acapulco, to Tahiti! Win a year's supply of dog food! Win $100,000 by simply sending in the labels! It must often surprise the manufacturers and the retailers, but the fact is that a massive advertising campaign and the promise of a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow is still more effective than any kind of price-cutting.

This, of course, is the male domination that chains women far more than any fancied prejudice of status or opportunity, yet clearly they're not prepared to take a position and are content to whine at what they assume to be the male assumption of "superiority." It makes you wonder, indeed, if the male isn't, in fact, superior since I am perfectly sure that no male shopper would allow himself to be hoodwinked so long and so easily.

If there is to be any real liberation it must start where women have more or less complete control over their own destinies. That is the first step. If others are necessary they will come after women have demonstrated that they can cope with their own responsibilities.

Loitering Drunks Upset Merchants

Winos are going to get the bum's rush out of Nootka Court and Centennial Square as Victoria police start increasing patrols in both areas.

City manager Jim Bramley told council's finance committee today that police patrols in the two areas have been stepped up and that should solve the problem of drunks loitering.

Nootka Court developer Hans Hartwig, in a letter to council, said a number of alcoholics have chosen the court as a hangout.

"They have . . . molested the tenants occupying the stores; threatened their customers; vomited in the hallways; pulled knives on the night watchman and maintenence men; pointed a rifle at one of the tenants, pedestrians, and last spring tore the clothes off a girl trying to rape her," Hartwig said in his letter.

Hartwig said police had been helpful in removing the drunks from the court but it was police opinion that the tenants had no right to lay charges for trespassing because the building has become a public thoroughfare.

He asked that council give the tenants "relief from these criminal elements" and said if that was not done, provisions would be made to remove the drunks by force from the premises.

In another letter to council, about 20 shop owners in Nootka Court suggested that a couple of police officers on foot patrol in the downtown would be enough to keep "these unsavory people" from loitering in Nootka Court.

The letter said the drunks, who frequent the government liquor store, often corner passersby to beg money.

The merchants said two drunk men had been observed propositioning a young boy on the sidewalk outside Nootka Court. A businesswoman from the court intervened and sent the boy on his way, the letter said.

Bramley said the stepped-up police patrols would probably mean police cars would drive by the area more often but said he felt that would solve the problem.

Cabbage Man 'Crying' Again Says Safeway

A Saanich savoy cabbage grower who is upset because supermarkets won't accept his early, bumper crop for quick sale, is stuck with his specialty crop until he offers it "at a price," a Canada Safeway spokesman said today.

Market gardener Geoff Vantreight complained Wednesday to Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors his 100-ton cabbage crop is caught in the squeeze of a warm September and the federal freeze on prices.

But Safeway district manager Jack Fidler said Vantreight plants a lot of the specialty item "and every year he's crying on our shoulders to take his crop."

The crop is early and Vantreight said he and other farmers on Vancouver Island and in the Fraser Valley find they have a sudden surplus that chain food stores will not buy for "specials."

Fidler said savoy cabbage is a specialty item and does not sell in quantities comparable to conventional varieties.

If Vantreight offers his cabbage "at a price, we'll consider it," Fidler said.

"We back local growers. We sell everything we can while they're in storage," before turning to imports, he said.

Vantreight said the chains told him they had not been able to get clarification on how the guidelines limiting price increases will apply to items which have been marked down as advertised specials and later rise to normal levels.

He said one interpretation is that controls appear to prevent markdown substantially below current market value.

The chains, he said, cannot buy his crop for quick sale at 39 cents a pound because later in the season they must offer imported cabbage at 59 cents, which will be in excess of the allowable rise in retail price.

Normally the cabbage would not be ready to harvest until December, January or February and Vantreight said much of it has spoiled already, so he is offering it cheap to recover what he can.

A spokesman for Malkin's wholesale produce had no comment on Vantreight's allegation, but he said he had had no adverse experience with the guidelines so far.

"Special prices to us are passed along quickly to the stores," he added.

Fidler pointed out there is a backlog of product on the Lower Mainland due to shutdown of supermarkets for more than a month with labor problems, and because there was less advertising carried out in Greater Victoria during that period.

Vantreight told directors the chain stores had put off a decision pending clarification of the guidelines, but each day spoils more cabbage.

"All I can do is let it rot there. It'll smell up all of Saanich. At least they'll know where I live," the grower said.

Police Wages Slipped to 18th

In 10 years Victoria city policemen have slipped from the position of third highest paid police officers in Canada to 18th in a list of 21 cities with population exceeding 60,000.

The testimony was given at the opening today of an arbitartion hearing which will result in a binding award on the city of Victoria and its police force — the combination of negotiations which began 10 months ago and nearly reached a strike stage last month.

Victoria lawyer Dermond Owen-Flood is representing the police union, and Vancouver lawyer Jack Giles is appearing for the city.

In his opening statement, Owen-Flood told Barclay he will be calling a total of eight witnesses during the two-days set aside this week for presentation of the police case. They will include Bob Stewart, formerly of the B.C. Police Commission and now deputy police chief for the city of Vancouver.

BARCLAY
. . . arbitrator

The city will make its submission Thursday and Friday next week.

Pat Braiden, president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, gave lengthy testimony tracing the general background to wage negotiations with the city of Victoria going back to 1946 and involving a total of 29 collective agreements. Most of those, he said, were settled only by arbitration or mediation.

Braiden said in 1964 Victoria policemen were only $9 behind their counterparts in Vancouver, who were then paid $511 per month, making them the highest paid police department in Canada. Victoria held third position.

By July 1, 1974, however, the differential had widened to $67. At that time a first class constable in Vancouver was getting $1,171 per month and Victoria constable $1,104 per month.

Braiden referred to a mediation commission award handed down by Judge Parker two years ago in which the judge dismissed the city's contention that its policemen should be paid on a par with Saanich officers.

"The responsibilities of Saanich policemen can not be as onerous as those of Victoria City Police," the award stated. "It is our view that the proper comparison is between Victoria and Vancouver."

Braiden produced a "crime map" showing that in Victoria's downtown core 40 per cent of the metropolitan area's criminal offences are reported, with the crime rate decreasing steadily with distance from the city centre.

Owen-Flood said later witnesses will produce figures to prove that Victoria has "the highest crime rate per policeman" of any city in B.C.

Agreement by both sides late last moth to seek binding arbitration narrowly averted a threatened strike.

Earlier, the city had refused to endorse a contract offer submitted by the Victoria Police Board and accepted by the union. The union subsequently requested a Labor Relations Board ruling on whether the city was bound by the collective agreement.

The LRB ruling said the city did have the right to refuse.

In other words, a municipality and not its police board has the final say on what salaries should be paid to its policemen.

The city police initially sought parity with police forces on the Lower Mainland. During negotiation they reduced their demand to that of parity with Saanich, involving increases of 22.3 to 34 per cent.

The city's maximum offer, after rejecting the police board proposal was 17.5 per cent.

Four Hurt In Crash

Four men were injured and two cars received $4,000 damage in a collision early this morning at the entrance to Paul's restaurant, 1900 Douglas.

Treated for minor injuries and released from Victoria General Hospital were John Stevens, 3016 Jutland; Kevin Benedick, same address; Gregory Howard, 1304 Charlton; and Vincent Wilson of Victoria.

Wilson had been driving south on Douglas and Stevens was headed north when their cars collided at 2:11 a.m., police said.
